COSTS FORCING N-POWER SWITCH

Has B.C. Dammed Its Last River?

By JOHN MIKA

British Columbia this week turned the corner to head into the atomic age.

Once across that threshhold it seems inprobable the province will turn back to damming major rivers for power development.

That appears to be the import of Premier Bennett's announcement that he has asked Ottawa to help build a nuclear power plant near Duncan.

●

It seems to be the death notice for the Liard River project favored by Resources Minister Ray Williston and a victory for B.C. Hydro Chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum and former co-chairman Dr. Hugh Keenleyside who argued for a switch to nuclear generating stations.

While the running argument of the past three years between Williston and the two power utility administrators was fought on technical grounds, Bennett likely made his decision on the basis of his specialty — money.

●

The tremendous increase in interest rates, which has played hob with costing projections for his pet "two-river power policy," seriously undermines the chief argument the premier has used in favoring hydro-electric generation — lower operating costs if dams are big enough to achieve economies of scale in capital costs.

There's not much point to achieving lower operating costs at the price of crippling capital costs which will take generations to pay off.

The "two river-policy" was started too late to escape the penalties of soaring interest rates which developed after the decision to go hydro rather than nuclear as other areas were starting to do.

Today most countries of the world have nuclear power plants in operation — from tropical India to the top of Greenland's ice cap. Ontario has had one in operation almost three years, is completing a larger one and building three more to produce one-third of its power needs before the end of the decade.

Almost 5.5 million kilowatts —close to double the Peace and Columbia projects — will be generated in Ontario nuclear power stations within a few years.

Quebec, like Ontario, also appears to be switching from hydro and has started toward its first nuclear power plant.

The argument over the balance of costs began in B.C. as long ago as late 1966 and by the following April broke into the open with a Times article which pinpointed the proposed Duncan atomic station as the battleground.

●

At that time, Shrum and Kennleyside both were quoted as saying B.C. likely would not undertake any more major hydro-electric projects after the Peace and Columbia were completed and they urged construction of the first nuclear plant for southern Vancouver Island.

Keenleyside added that a firm decision between a new hydro giant and atomic power had to be made no later than 1972 and preferably earlier.

●

Williston disagreed, suggesting Vancouver Island's needs would be met by more submarine cables or expansion of the Jordan River plant and new hydro plants on northern Island rivers.

Bennett stayed out of the argument although privately he pointed out hydro power had an extra advantage because it could be interrupted during non-peak periods. But in the legislature he praised the Liard River proposal and authorized preliminary surveys to site a 2 million kilowatt project as the biggest single hydro installation of all.

. . . Turning Up Heat on Salmon

A switch by B.C. from hydro to nuclear energy does not eliminate a continuing problem for electrical generation in this province — preserving the salmon industry.

Damming rivers cut off spawning grounds — as well as flooding huge areas of land. The most logical hydro project in all B.C., the Fraser River, has consistently been forestalled because of the valuable fish runs.

Nuclear power plants eliminate that problem but pose another which, because of widespread concern over pollution problems, may prove even thornier to the government and B.C. Hydro's planners.

The immense heat developed by the atomic fuel is used to create steam to drive dynamos, but

BENSON VS. EXTREMISTS

Tax Reform 'Bomb' Needs Quick Defusing

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA—Finance Minister Benson is under powerful pressure this week to switch tactics on tax reform and to relax austerity for the real victims of inflation.

He is being urged by Liberal MPs and other advisers to move swiftly to defuse the tense political situation by revising immediately his white paper on tax reform to settle some of the controversial issues and by raising pensions for old people in need in his coming budget.

'Challenged' to Choose Sides

As he strives to carry through tax reform, Benson is being challenged to choose political sides between the low income groups who would profit from his proposals and the middle class who would suffer.

As he battles to keep the lid on government spending and on taxes to restrain inflation by balancing the budget, he has to face the fact that people on fixed incomes are carrying far more than a fair share of the burden of his policies.

Before he published his tax paper in November Benson received from aides a forecast of the public reaction. He was warned that after the initial honeymoon there would be severe criticism, and he said quite cheerfully that he expected to get hell from the business community.

Benson's strategy was to ride out the storm while the committees of Commons and Senate completed their enquiries into the tax plan, and then to come forward with compromise legislation.

Extremists Now Well Organized

No one foresaw, however, that the extremist opponents of the white paper would become so well organized and so successful, apparently, in touching a public nerve.

The drive to mobilize the middle class on the tax issue outside the main stream of party politics beginning to resemble the far-right movements in the United States.

The hate-rumors which plagued Trudeau during the 1968 election are coming back into circulation, discussion is escaping the bounds of reason and responsibility and the poison of extremism is seeping into the political mood.

Another new political factor in the situation is that Conservative leader Robert Stanfield had decided to jump ahead of the parliamentary enquiries, to make a major political issue of the tax paper.

Benson is now being advised that he cannot sit back and take this punishment, from the extremists and the Tories, for the next several months. He must fight back.

Retains Freedom to Amend Plans

His difficulty is to devise a way of defending his proposals without becoming committed to them. He must be able to answer the critics while retaining enough freedom to amend his plans in the light of debate.

Benson's solution may be to move swiftly to meet some of the technical criticism of his proposals so that the fight will focus on matters of broad importance and principle.

By dropping the plan to tax unrealized capital gains, lifting the tax limits well clear of private homes and property, offering reassurance to small businessmen who feel threatened by new taxes, and clearing up some other irritants, Benson could disarm much criticism.

He has already promised to furnish a supplementary white paper to the Commons committee, explaining the reasoning behind his original proposals and describing alternatives. Some of this material has already gone to the committee in confidence, and other papers are in draft in the finance department.

Benson could fairly easily convert this supplementary paper into a revision of the original document, rolling back some ideas.

This would help to bring the debate back from what are essentially technical questions to the central issue of shifting the tax burden from the lower income groups to the middle and upper income classes.

FLAMES ENGULF POLICE CAR in Santa Barbara Wednesday night after demonstrators overturned and set fire to it in wave of violent protests which followed an on-campus speech by Chicago Seven defence attorney William Kunstler in the afternoon. (AP Wirephoto.)

Rioting Protesters Burn Bank

Times News Services

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Rampaging demonstrators protesting the "capitalist establishment" burned a Bank of America branch to a skeleton today while outnumbered police and firemen watched helplessly.

Police reinforcements were called in as about 800 protesters watched the flames burn out the inside of the one-storey brick building.

One student said the branch of the biggest commercial bank in the United States was burned because "it holds the money for the war in Vietnam."

Then a solid phalanx of 240 helmeted officers swept through the campus community, Isla Vista, dispersing the crowd without a confrontation.

The retreating protesters pelted the oncoming officers with rocks and taunted them with shouts of "Piggy! Piggy! Piggy!" as they darted away.

The outbreak of fires and window smashing followed a campus speech Wednesday afternoon by William Kunstler, a defence lawyer in the Chicago Seven riot trial.

★ ★ ★

Kunstler told some 5,000 persons "the real violence doesn't occur in Santa Barbara."

"The real violence occurs in the backrooms of police stations.

"I think the shadow of the Swastika is on every courthouse, on universities, on government buildings, maybe even on the apartment door next to you."

However, students denied the Kunstler speech was responsible for the violence, saying it stemmed from long-standing problems. All the windows of the same bank which was burned Wednesday had been broken out on Tuesday afternoon, when the trouble started.

Sheriff James Webster had described the situation as "completely out of hand" Wednesday night. He asked Gov. Ronald Reagan for National Guard troops, but guardsmen were not mobilized.

★ ★ ★

The bank fire was set by several protesters who rolled a gasoline-soaked trash bin in through a smashed window and set it ablaze against a wall, deputies said. Students from a nearby fraternity put out the blaze, but protesters fired it up again.

The one-square-mile Isla Vista community is populated mainly by apartment-dwelling students from the adjacent University of California campus six miles north of Santa Barbara.

The demonstrators explained they were protesting the war in Vietnam, the "capitalist establishment" that finances it and what a student called "increasing police repression aimed at stifling political dissent."

Tenants Gain Rights In New Legislation

By BRUCE YEMEN

"Radical changes" in the landlord-tenant relationship were introduced into the legislature Wednesday night by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

A 66-section bill, amending the Landlord and Tenant Act, puts agreements between tenants and landlords on the same basis as other contracts and appears to strengthen the position of tenants.

But Peterson said in an interview he doesn't expect the bill to satisfy completely either tenants or landlords.

Among the major provisions are:

● Unless a municipal bylaw states otherwise, security deposits are prohibited. These are usually required for possible damage or cleaning costs, but Peterson said there had been abuse of the system by too many landlords.

● A landlord can however, require a deposit to be applied to the last month's rent under a lease agreement, but must pay the tenant six per cent annual interest on the money.

● The right of the landlord to seize goods and furniture for non-payment of rent is abolished. Rental debts would have to be collected on the same basis as other debts.

● Landlords cannot enter premises of a tenant without written notice to the tenant at least 24 hours in advance of the time of entry, which must be between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. Exceptions to this rule are cases of emergency, of consent of tenant at time of entry, of landlord's right to show premises to prospective new tenants after notice to vacate has been given, and where the tenant has abandoned the premises.

● No lock may be altered on the premises by the landlord without the tenant's consent.

9.3 PER CENT INCREASE IN GNP

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada produced $78,099,000,000 in goods and services last year, a 9.3-per-cent increase in the gross national product despite a record loss of production because of labor disputes, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The gross national product for 1968 was $71,454,000,000.

Hanoi Troops Continue Offensive Into Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos — Despite repeated bombing strikes by Laotian air force jets, North Vietnamese troops continued advancing today west of the Plain of Jars toward the highway linking this administrative capital with the royal capital of Luang Prabang.

Military sources, who reported the North Vietnamese advance, said Laotian ground forces had been withdrawn from the path of the Communist thrust. The resistance being offered to the advance, they said, was in the form of the bombing raids flown since Wednesday by T28 jets.

Meanwhile in Washington, with an angry attack against the American role in Laos, a group of senators has demanded the administration disclose how heavily the United States is involved in the Asian nation.

"The facts of our involvement have been concealed from the American people," Tennessee Democrat Albert Gore said during floor debate Wednesday, a charge supported by Senator Charles

. . . HEAT ON FISH

most of it has to be dissipated by huge quantities of water.

B.C. Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum, characteristically optimistic about problems his utility might cause other segments of the economy, has estimated that the Duncan plant would raise water temperatures in Cowichan Bay by 10 degrees and help in propagating fish.

Salt water temperatures in this area generally range between 51 and 55 degrees and the Fisheries Association of B.C. — foresightedly — warned last June that since nuclear power plants are going to come to B.C., the problems of thermal pollution should be studied immediately because young salmon can't survive in water warmer than 68 degrees.

Even Shrum's temperature estimate is in the critical area for salmon. But Ontario's one-million kilowatt nuclear power plant nearing completion at Pickering is projected to draw 1.25 million gallons per minute of Lake Ontario water for cooling and will go back into the lake 14 degrees warmer.

The proposed Duncan plant would generate 500,000 kilowatts but exact siting of its cooling water system is not known yet.

The Fisheries Association pointed out that thermal pollution is a major problem now associated with the 14 nuclear power plants operating in the U.S. and will become worse quickly because 72 more plants are under construction now.

●

A plant proposed at nearby Anacortes, Wash., drew a strong local protest during public hearings last fall because of fears that thermal pollution would harm Puget Sound fishing.

Kurt Horn, president of the Cowichan-Malahat branch of the Society for Pollution and Environmental Control, already has expressed concern "that, depending on the location of (the Duncan plant), the cooling water dispersed by the plant could be a problem if there is no swift ocean current."

Horn Wednesday also said he would study the possibility of radiation pollution from the proposed plant.

Shrum said there woull be absolutely no radiation danger because the heavy water process used in Canada does not bring cooling water directly into contact with the atomic fuel pile.

However, the Oregon portion of the Columbia River has become known as the "hottest" body of surface water in the world as the result of radioactivity created by the atomic reactor plant upstream at Hanford, Wash., during the past six years.

U.S. Plants use a different process than heavy water.

The U.S. Federal Water Pollution Control Administration and the Oregon Board of Health in 1966 asked for shut down or reduced operation of the Hanford plant because of radiation levels in the river.

Oregon State Senator Ted Hallock warned that establishment of a second atomic reactor using the river for cooling would be the "final signature on the death warrant for the Columbia."

. . . WHITE PAPER

The extremists denounce this as socialism. Stanfield agrees that those in poverty should be helped, but argues that it can be done without hurting the middle class — a neat trick.

Some commentators, analysts and economists think that fiscal change on the scale proposed by Benson would be damaging to development and to the social fabric.

These are the real questions that need to be discussed in a rational way.

Meantime, the lowest income groups do need immediate help as inflation erodes their narrow margin of subsistence. The extent to which Benson can help in his budget next month depends on his current review of the economic outlook.

He has a healthy budget surplus this year, but as the economy slows down in coming months, spending may rise faster than tax revenues. He may be able to anticipate only a small surplus, or even a balance, in the new fiscal year, and the prices and imcomes commission has asked him not to raise taxes. This leaves little room for initiative.

But whatever he may be able to do for others in need Benson is being urged to assist old people whose pensions rise by only 2 per cent a year when costs are climbing at twice the rate.

Benson can right this wrong efficiently and economically by raising the supplement to the basic pension which goes only to those who have no other income.

. . . LAOS

McC. Mathias Jr. of Maryland, said "Laos has become an arena for the repetition of the mistakes of our Vietnamese involvement."

Defence secretary Melvin R. Laird said today the United States is using air power in Laos only to protect its position in Vietnam and has made no basic change of policy in Laos in the last three to four years.

No American ground forces are fighting in Laos, Laird told reporters. He said bombing is being used to cut off enemy Communist supplies going through Laos to South Vietnam.

"We have used air power — the President announced this at his press conference in January — in Laos to protect our position in South Vietnam," Laird said. "We have no military forces engaged in ground combat in Laos."

Both Laird and Representative George H. Mahon (Dem., Tex.) skirted flat denials that any of the bombing is supporting Laotian forces against the present enemy onslaught but both said the purpose of the bombing is to protect the U.S. position in Vietnam.

. . . RIGHTS

- Increases in rent cannot be made in the first year of a tenancy agreement and those increases can only be made with at least three month's notice.
- No landlord or landlord's agent may impose "special restrictions" on access to apartment buildings by political candidates or their authorized representatives.
- Penalty assessed on landlords for violating the sections relating to security deposits, lock-outs, rent increases and access by political candidates or canvassers in a fine "not exceeding $1,000."

★ ★ ★

Peterson said the bill also would place on landlords "some obligation to re-rent" after a tenant leaves a dwelling with an unexpired lease, whereas before a landlord might simply sit around leaving the dwelling empty and demanding the tenant pay the balance on the lease.

The right of tenants to sublet leases of six months or more duration is protected but landlords have the option of simply cancelling the lease rather than accepting the sublease.

For security deposits currently held by landlords, the the six-per cent interest provision applies and the deposit and interest must be paid within 15 days after termination or renewal of a lease. There is provision for judges to extend the period of current security deposits.

★ ★ ★

When a landlord proposes to retain a portion of a deposit, he must have either the written consent of the tenant or the order of a judge of the provincial court.

Peterson said the bill may have the effect of increasing the trend toward written tenancy aggreements or leases because many of the protections offered for tenants are more readily applicable to clear-cut agreements.

Landlords would be required to maintain rented premises "in a good state of repair and fit for habitation . . . for complying with health and safety regulations, including any housing standards required by law and notwithstanding that any state of non-repair existed to the knowledge of the tenant before the tenancy agreement was entered into."

★ ★ ★

The tenant would be responsible for "ordinary cleanliness . . . and for the repair or damage caused by his wilful or negligent conduct or that of persons who are permitted on the premises by him."

Also required is "ordinary health, cleanliness and sanitary standards" in the premises by the tenant.

Enforcement of these sections would be by a provincial court judge who could end a tenancy agreement under terms that he sees fit or order necessery repairs charged to the responsible person, whether tenant or landlord.

Appeals of the provincial court decisions may be made to a judge of the county court.

The bill also provides for municipalities to set up a Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau, if desired, to give advice, hear complaints, mediate disputes, and disseminate educational information on landlord-tenant matters.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

My friend, the old Wyoming cowboy, is going on 70, but he never misses a day riding one or two of his string of horses. We meet almost every monring on my walk in this unspoiled desert area. And he alwasy has a story to tell about the weather. Some are not printable; this one is:

The Indians of Wyoming, way back when a scalp was something a cowboy could lose all at once, could keep tabs on forthcoming weather conditions by studying the scalps that hung over the entrance to their tepees.

"The retired cowboy explained: "If a scalp got kind of curly and kinked up a bit, then an Indian knew that rain was on the way. If the hairs on a scalp fell in long and straight plaits, then an Indian knew that dry weather would hang around for a spell.

"Those Injuns were smart about the weather. So were the old cowboys. They had to be."

A CALL FOR ACTION TO CURB PRICE INCREASES

PRICES AND INCOMES COMMISSION

All business firms and other commercial establishments in Canada are called upon to reduce the number and size of price increases they would normally make in 1970 by ensuring that such increases are clearly less than the amount needed to cover increases in costs.

This basic principle and the way in which it should be interpreted in particular areas of business were developed and adopted by the National Conference on Price Stability on February 9 and 10, and were endorsed by the Heads of Government at the Federal-Provincial Conference on February 16 and 17.

The Closing Statement of the National Conference on Price Stability and the relevant portion of the Statement of Conclusions of the Federal-Provincial Conference of First Ministers are reproduced below.

Prices and Incomes Commission

John H. Young, Chairman — Paul Gérin-Lajoie, Vice-Chairman
George E. Freeman, Commissioner — George V. Haythorne, Commissioner

Closing Statement of The National Conference on Price Stability

The National Conference on Price Stability, called by the Prices and Incomes Commission, met in Ottawa on February 9 and 10. It was attended by senior officers of national business and farm associations, representatives of professional groups, leaders of a broad spectrum of the Canadian business community and observers from the federal and provincial governments.

The Canadian business community had previously demonstrated its willingness to exercise a meaningful degree of restraint in pricing policies in 1970 through proposals made to the Commission by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Retail Council of Canada and the Canadian Bankers' Association.

While the groups represented at the Conference are prepared to take an initiative as a contribution to a broad program of restraint, they emphasize that an indispensable requirement for the control of inflation is a comparable measure of restraint by wage and salary earners, by governments at all levels and indeed by everyone.

There was broad agreement among those attending the Conference on the following:

(a) Business firms generally, if called upon to do so, would reduce the number and size of price increases they would normally make in 1970.

(b) More specifically, where higher prices are needed to cover higher costs, and market conditions make them feasible, business firms generally, if called upon to do so, would ensure that price increases were clearly less than the amount needed to cover the increases in costs at a normal volume of output and sales.

(c) The Conference recognizes that domestic price criteria should not be applied to goods sold mainly in export markets. The Commission will keep the position of export industries under review and if it finds that developments in some of these industries are impairing the general price restraint program, it will seek appropriate solutions to the problems.

(d) Business firms would be prepared to co-operate with the Prices and Incomes Commission in such price reviews as it might decide to conduct.

(e) The Conference recognizes that over most of agricultural production farmers do not have any significant discretion over the level of prices they receive. The representatives of agriculture present agreed that in the narrow range where the marketing system permits some price discretion, farmers, if called upon to do so, would act during 1970 in accordance with general pricing criteria and procedures.

(f) Specific commitments have already been given by the chartered banks for 1970 not to increase their existing schedule of service charges in Canada. They have also undertaken not to increase interest rates charged on Canadian dollar loans in Canada, except to the extent of any corresponding percentage point increase in the rates payable on Canadian dollar personal savings deposits. Trust and mortgage loan companies have agreed not to increase the existing spread between their prime mortgage lending rates and the highest rates paid on their term borrowings, and to refrain from increasing existing service charges on savings accounts. Representatives of life insurance companies, credit unions and other types of financial business affirmed their full support for the Commission's restraint program, and agreed that the principle that price increases should be held within cost increases should apply in their own operations.

(g) That professional groups would be prepared to participate in a broad program of price restraint and to recommend to the provincial associations that they postpone or limit increases in existing fee schedules for professional services during 1970.

(h) Representatives of the transportation, telecommunications and utilities industries endorsed the Commission's general criteria for price restraint. As a positive expression of co-operation, the members agreed to provide the Commission with thirty days notice of any intent to increase general rate schedules.

(i) The general merchandise sector of the retail and wholesale trades in determining pricing policies during 1970 would undertake not to increase initial markups on its various merchandise categories unless realized profit per dollar of sales would fall below that of the base period. In such cases increases in markups would be sufficient only to restore returns to the level of the base period.

(j) The grocery sector of the retail trade in determining pricing policies during 1970 would undertake not to increase initial markups unless realized profit per dollar of sales, calculated on the volume of sales carried on over their entire operation would fall below that of the base period. In such cases increases in markups would be sufficient only to restore returns to the level of the base period.

(k) It is recognized that costs have been advancing particularly rapidly in most sectors of the construction industry and that special steps are needed by all concerned to reduce the rate of increase in these costs, including efforts to level out the flow of construction work. The representatives of the construction industry agreed that individual firms in the industry if called upon to do so would during 1970 absorb a proportion of their increased costs in accordance with the general pricing criteria.

Outline of Proposed Review Procedure

The price reviews are intended to ensure that the revenues produced by a price increase are less than the increases in costs that led to the price change, unless the increase in price is needed to improve a demonstrably inadequate rate of return on capital investment. Reviews will not be broad studies but will concentrate solely on compliance with the proposed pricing criteria.

The Commission is to be informed as soon as possible about any major price changes, but approval by the Commission in advance of the change in price is not necessary, and would not in general be practicable. The reviews will be conducted by a qualified staff of senior government officials and business executives who will be working with the Commission on a temporary basis.

Information needed to determine relevant revenue and cost changes will be requested by the price review staff in private meetings with the firm or firms involved. Actual operating records will be requested in most cases. Assistance in analysing data will be sought from firms but any conclusions reached will be made by the Commission as an independent body.

One of the main reasons for conducting price reviews on a detailed basis is to sort out cost changes arising from a change in the volume of sales from those due to a change in the price of inputs. The year 1969, or the nearest fiscal year, will in general be used as the base year when considering changes in costs and revenues. In cases where this would be clearly inappropriate, a suitable alternative base period would be selected.

During 1970 some firms may well experience unit cost increases as a result of a temporary decline in their volume of sales or output because of adverse market conditions. Such cost increases cannot be regarded as automatic justification for an equivalent price increase. On the other hand, some firms will experience unit cost decreases as a result of increases either in the volume of sales or in efficiency. In these cases, firms are expected to pass on some of the cost savings in terms of lower prices. The price review teams will attempt to decide what is reasonable price behaviour in response to unit cost changes brought about by changes in volume. Consideration will be given to both the size and the likely duration of the "abnormal" sales volume.

Because of the care with which the price reviews must be made, it is proposed to concentrate them on important price increases by major firms and by market leaders in smaller markets. Some additional reviews may also be undertaken of less important price increases reported to the Commission by customers or other interested parties.

STATEMENT OF CONCLUSIONS
FEDERAL-PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE OF FIRST MINISTERS

(a) The Heads of Government endorsed the Commission's plan to call without delay upon business firms generally to follow the basic principle adopted by the National Conference on Price Stability, namely to reduce the number and size of price increases they would normally make in 1970 by ensuring that such price increases are clearly less than the amount needed to cover increases in costs. First Ministers urged all Canadians to co-operate actively in restraining price and income increases during 1970.

(b) The federal government and the provincial governments undertook to observe the same principle in the prices or fees charged for goods and services offered for sale by government departments and agencies and publicly owned business enterprises, and provincial governments agreed to take such action as they deem appropriate with a view to having local governments observe the same basic principle in their pricing policies.

(c) The First Ministers agreed that governments should exercise as much restraint in their spending, taxing and borrowing as was practicable, without damaging essential services or retarding economic development.

(d) Provincial governments agreed to consider as a priority matter the possible establishment or strengthening of procedures for reviewing increases in rentals charged on existing self-contained residential accommodation in major urban centres during 1970, in keeping with the basic principle adopted by the National Conference on Price Stability.

(e) The First Ministers agreed that, to the extent they were in a position to exert influence in this area, they would urge professional associations to postpone or limit increases in existing fee schedules for professional services during 1970. Some Premiers urged care, however, that such action should not result in the loss to a province of professional skills.

(f) The Government of Canada and most provincial governments expressed the hope that government sanctions would not be required but agreed that if necessary they would use such means as are within their control to deal with cases of serious non-compliance with the pricing criteria as reported by the Commission. Some provinces pointed out that sanctions must be applied by all provinces to be effective and that action by any one province by itself would not be effective.

PRICES AND INCOMES COMMISSION, P.O. BOX 219, OTTAWA, CANADA

Fishery Pacts 'Suspect'

OTTAWA (CP) — MP David Anderson charged today that the secrecy involved in the fisheries department's anti-pollution activities has led to "great suspicion" about the effectiveness of its regulations enforcement.

Mr. Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich) said people on the West Coast are questioning whether fisheries officials are enforcing anti-pollution regulations because agreements between the department and industries are "done behind locked doors."

His comments were made at the Commons fisheries committee, before which Dr. A. W. H. Needler, deputy minister of fisheries, was appearing as a witness.

Dr. Needler agreed to prepare a "statement of general policy" on the department's anti-pollution criteria for plants discharging wastes into the water.

He said it would "take hours" to discuss particular situations.

Mr. Anderson referred to a pulp mill at Crofton — which he later said is owned by B.C. Forest Products — which was taken to court by fishermen for its damage to the oyster industry but which "bought out" the fishermen by settling out of court.

Mr. Anderson said the fisheries department had agreed that the plant's effluent-treatment system was satisfactory, yet the company was not confident that this was the case because it did not want the matter to come to court.

GOT BAD ADVICE?

Dr. Needler said that in this case "perhaps the company was given bad advice," and that in addition there were breakdowns in the treatment facilities which were "the company's responsibility."

"This type of thing leads to great suspicion," said Mr. Anderson. "All this information should be made public."

He asked Dr. Needler to give "perhaps an hour-long presentation" outlining the department's requirements.

The deputy minister said company plans for pollution treatment are generally not made public because they are "part of their over-all development plan."

He said most companies ask the department for advice on facilities before beginning operation, although the fisheries department could not prevent the company from building any type of treatment facilities but could only prosecute later if they were inadequate.

Dr. Needler said tests are made to show whether a mill's effluent is deleterious to fish over a certain period, sometimes by putting the fish in a 65-per-cent concentration of it over 96 hours.

Mr. Anderson said he would like information on the possibility that some effluent might not be strong enough to kill fish, but might be so obnoxious to them it would drive them away and force them to change their migration patterns.

Express Swells With Ads

VANCOUVER (CP) — The third edition of the union-produced Vancouver Express hit the streets today, loaded with advertising and twice the size of the newspaper's first edition printed last Saturday.

Meanwhile, top-level talks between Pacific Press Ltd., which produces the city's two regular dailies, the morning Province and evening Sun, and its five unions were to open Friday in Victoria.

The Express, brainchild of the Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper guild, put out a 24-page edition today that included four full pages of advertising and many partial pages. Woodward's Stores Ltd. bought the entire back page, first of the major department stores to advertise in the Express.

★ ★ ★

The newspaper is being printed three times a week—on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays—until production of the Sun and Province, halted by Pacific Press Feb. 15, is resumed.

In Victoria, general manager Ed Benson of Pacific Press was scheduled to lead the management team in negotiations aimed at ending the dispute with the guild and four mechanical unions.

The guild officially went on strike against the company Tuesday following expiration of 72-hour strike notice. The printers, stereotypers, pressmen and mailers have all approved strike action, but have not served the company with the required 72-hour notice.

Mine Work at Resort Halted by Injunction

A Supreme Court injunction was granted Wednesday against mining exploration efforts by Vancouver interests on East Sooke property of Grouse Nest Resort Ltd.

The restraint order, made by Judge M. L. T. Drake, was obtained after a director of the resort's holding company encountered two men, a bulldozer and truck working on part of the 3,000-acre estate on Sooke Basin on Monday.

WORKERS 'RUDE'

Leonora Kamil said she tried to talk with the mining survey men about what they were doing on the land, but she said they were rude and did not want to discuss the matter. They were damaging the property, she said.

Mrs. Kamil is a director of Develco Holding Ltd. and has been visiting the property from her home abroad.

She submitted an affidavit Wednesday through counsel for Grouse Nest Resort and an ex parte injunction was served to men working on the property Wednesday afternoon.

The order is against Citex Mines Ltd. and Primac Exploration Services Ltd., both of 789 West Pender, Vancouver.

MINE WAS WORKED

Mrs. Kamil said if arrangements had been made prior to work starting, the company probably would have given permission for exploration to be done. Some development work on a copper prospect was done on the Grouse property more than 50 years ago.

Under B.C. mining legislation the right to access may be given if notice is served to the mining recorder and owner of property concerned.

In her affidavit, Mrs. Kamil said there was evidence of a clearing estimated at a quarter-acre in diameter, disturbed subsoil, several large piles of trees and brush, other clearings, survey ribbons and metal tagged stakes on the property. Access was by way of a trail marked on maps as "mine road."

Grouse Nest secured the land lying east of Sooke Harbor about 10 years ago, rebuilding the main property's lodge into a luxury resort that operated for two seasons, 1964-65. Since then it has been maintained as a private lodge.

A Supreme Court hearing will be held unless the parties agree to have the injunction set aside.

CHEQUES, GETAWAY CAR FOUND

TORONTO (CP) — Police early today found what is believed to be the getaway car of three armed men who robbed a downtown branch of the Bank of Montreal of $52,225 in cash and $6,744,170 in non-negotiable chequ4s.

Recovered with the car in an underground parking lot of a downtown apartment building on Alexander Street were the cheques payable to the Ontario department of transport, police said.

Ottawa May Pay For Idle Land

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson is expected to announce Friday in the Commons a broad program of aid to prairie farmers, including an injection of $150,000,000 in federal funds into the western Canadian economy.

Informed sources here say the move, in response to growing discontent in the western provinces, will include acreage payments to farmers of about $7 for each wheat-producing acre turned to summerfallow.

CASH ADVANCES

As well, in the coming crop year farmers who have reduced their wheat acreage but still have large stocks of wheat in storage will receive cash advances.

Canadian farmers had 24,400,000 acres in wheat in 1969.

In addition to the summerfallow acreage payments, Olson is expected to announce a broadening of the Farm Credit Corporation structure to permit buying of livestock or erection of new livestock support buildings through loans from the organization.

Provision may also be made for partial debt forgiveness on performance, but cabinet sources are remaining tight-lipped on details.

DIVERSIFICATION

Production diversification is the goal of the federal government and Olson is also expected to announce inducements which could go as high as $4 an acre for farmers who turn wheat acreage to some other cash crop.

The impact of the aid program is difficult to predict but observers here point out that a similar acreage payment program in 1941 took 10,000,000 acres out of wheat production.

Political observers here believe the aid program is the first step by Prime Minister Trudeau's Liberal government to improve its rapidly-deteriorating image on the prairies.

No Kissing

CALCUTTA (AP) — The government in eastern India's West Bengal state has decided not to allow kissing in films because it might cause "great harm to society as it would act as a brain softener." Kissing in public is not allowed in Indian society.

Ottawa Wants to Study N-Test Results Before Saying Anything

Special to the Times

OTTAWA — Canada wants to study the full effects of the first Alaska underground nuclear test at Amchitka before making any decision about representations to the U.S. on future tests.

★ ★ ★

External Affairs Minister Sharp made this point in Parliament Wednesday under questioning by New Democratic Party Leader Tommy Douglas.

Douglas said future tests — which he stated were to be three times as powerful as the first one according to newspaper reports — could have "very severe consequences" for the Canadian people.

He wanted to know if Ottawa is making any representations to Washington about the tests.

The external affairs minister replied that Canada still has not received the information on the results of the first Amchitka test last year, but has been told it will be made available when completed by the U.S.

Before the test, there had been fears in some parts of B.C. that the test would trigger earthquakes and tidal waves that could affect the entire Pacific northwest. This did not occur.

Sharp told Douglas that if the government felt, as it did at the first Amchitka test, that there are special reasons for representations, these will be made.

★ ★ ★

"The other test, of course, is some years off," said Sharp, "but before we agree to make representations or decide what sort of representations to make, we would want to study the data from the first test most carefully."

The Traders

THE NEW AGREEMENT ON energy imports from Canada sought by President Nixon is based essentially on the continental resource principle and it should be approached with a full measure of caution. The theory that the natural resources of North America should be developed as a unit, without regard to national boundaries, is heard with greater frequency these days, as United States resources are gradually staked out and depleted, and Canadian resources are being found in ever greater abundance.

The principle has advantages rooted in classical economics, but it takes little note of the political position of a country with its economy irrevocably linked with a neighbor more than ten times its size. The inevitable result of a full economic union with the United States would be that Canada would become little more than the well, the woodpile and the treasure chest for its enterprising partner. That is not the destiny which Canadians see for their country; it is not the destiny which is possible for us.

The process has already gone a long way, it must be admitted. United States investment in Canada's natural resources now wields great power, but we still retain the political power to impose prices, tariffs, taxes, quotas and other controls. Mr. Nixon's proposal for a "common energy" policy to be negotiated between the two countries would go far to tie Canada even more closely to the United States even though there would be trade benefits to be gained.

The discussions would cover oil, natural gas, coal, electricity, uranium ore, access to the Northwest Passage for United States tankers and to the Mackenzie Valley for construction of pipelines from Alaska. That sounds like a "here we are, come and get us" role for Canada. And Mr. Nixon makes it clearer by his statement that "all members (of his task force to study the situation) agree that a unique degree of security can be afforded by moving toward an integrated North American energy market." The discussions would "not likely" cover water exports, according to a Washington spokesman—but the possibility is left open.

The unique degree of security obviously would be felt mainly by the United States, which would have assured its supply lines in these essential commodities. But the whole concept takes on a carrot and stick aspect when Canadian oil exports to the United States are considered, for in return for an arrangement to import more of this resource, the United States says that "these increases would be contingent on fruitful talks with Canada toward free trade in other energy resources."

That seems to mean that Canada may sell its oil to the United States, including the large percentage of that oil owned by American investors, if it will make concessions to the United States in other areas. Eventually, this could mean that we might be asked for rights to our water resources as the price we would have to pay to be allowed to export other resources across the line.

Certainly, use of Canadian Arctic waters is to be one of the bargaining counters — an odd request, considering that there has been no thought of forbidding United States access to the Northwest Passage so long as adequate anti-pollution safeguards are enforced. But freedom to lay pipe through the Mackenzie Valley would constitute another far-reaching concession whose possible effects on the environment cannot at present be estimated.

Clearly, the United States is prepared to drive as hard a bargain as possible in regard to Canadian resources. We shall be very foolish if we allow ourselves to be led into sharing arrangements which do not guarantee us as a nation the security which Mr. Nixon seeks for his home industries.

Let 'em Walk

THE B.C. HYDRO PROPOSAL to prohibit men, women or children from riding on buses unless they have the exact fare in cash to put in the farebox is a typical piece of mechanical bureaucracy which places people second to every other consideration. Not only does Hydro want to charge as much as 33 per cent more—regardless of the recent federal request that prices should not be increased more than costs have risen — but it will give less service.

The excuse given for refusing to make change on buses is that in most cities in North America robberies of bus drivers have become more frequent. Therefore Victoria bus drivers must stop carrying change. What statistics has Hydro on Victoria bus robberies, and how much have they increased lately?

But the ridiculous aspect of the proposed system will become apparent when a school child hops aboard a bus in the morning, with his household's only change, a dollar bill or 50-cent piece. Will the child be ordered off the bus and so lose a day's schooling? Or will he have to pay a dollar to get to school—and have no money with which to get home later? Will elderly folk on rainy days have to stay home because they happen to have only a 50-cent piece in pocket money? The possible examples are endless.

This is the sort of decision made in back rooms by computers—both human and electronic — and it is totally divorced from the purpose of the service: getting human beings to and from their homes.

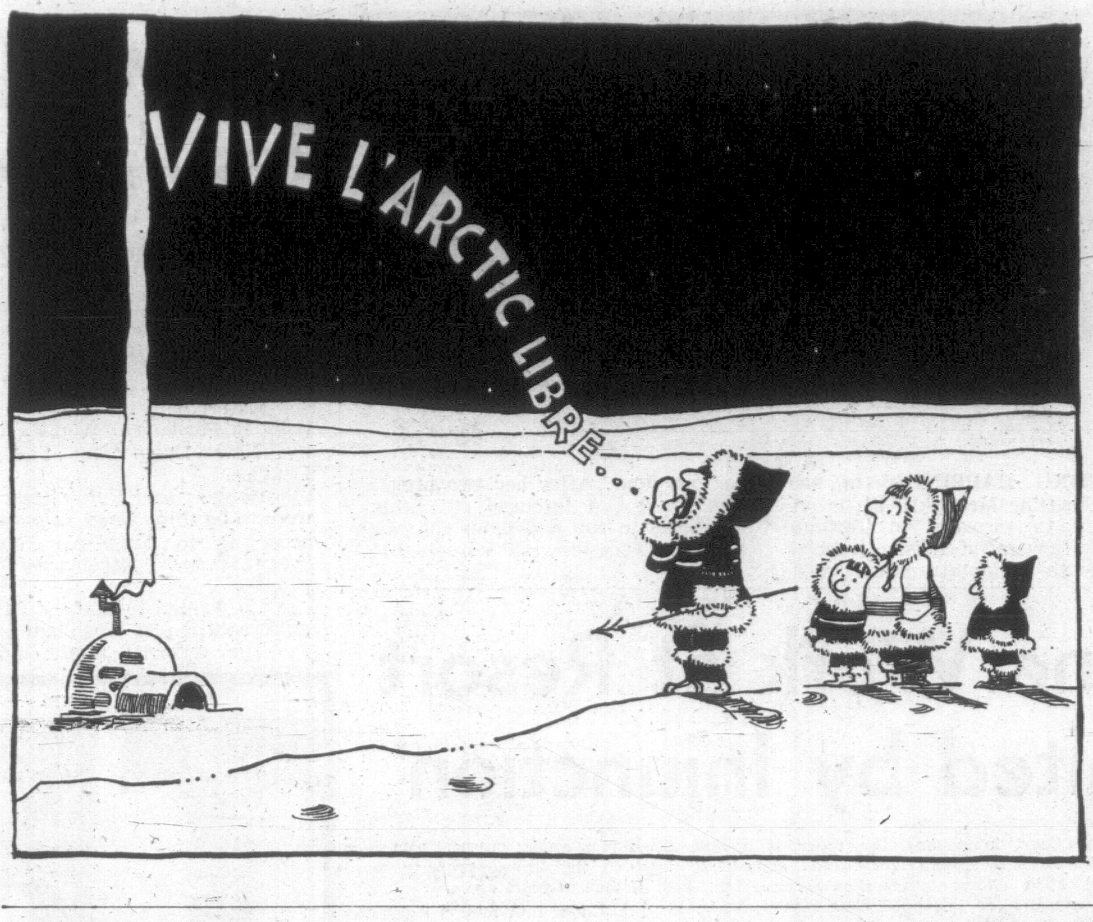
One aspect of the matter may not have occurred to the Hydro fare improvisators. The Revised Statutes of Canada make clear that "a tender of payment of money is a legal tender" if, among other provisions, the payer offers Bank of Canada notes to any amount; dimes, quarters or fifty-cent pieces up to a value of $10; five-cent pieces to a value of $5.00, and—an interesting thought for bus drivers—pennies to a value of 25 cents. Subject to these conditions, Canadian money must be accepted anywhere in Canada, even as far west as Dr. Shrum's buses.

Senator Wallace Farris

A LONG AND DRAMATIC chapter in provincial and national law and politics closed this week with the death in Vancouver of Senator J. Wallace deB. Farris, Canada's second senior senator, whose active career bridged the turbulent years from the time of the First World War to the space age. His passing, at 91, marks a milestone in the history of the province in which he had carved his particular niche.

A figure of strength and forcefulness, he established a commanding position in the legal world of British Columbia and Canada. High honors came his way, earned not only by his service to the legal profession but by the success and authority with which he conducted himself in the courts.

In the heyday of provincial Liberalism, his voice was heard in decisive party councils, vigorous and effective within and outside the Legislature. He will be remembered for the power with which he championed the causes he favored and the influence he wielded in his time.

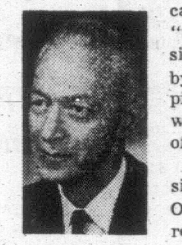


VIVE L'ARCTIC LIBRE...

FROM OTTAWA

By MAURICE WESTERN

—And Never Hyphenate LVMS and LDUS



Western

AN eminent Canadian scientist has urged the government to rely more on futurology in charting it policies. In many cases this would require no change at all since ministers rely on persons described as private consultants who are frequently invisible and normally function as seers. On the basis of such advice, Eric Kierans last week informed an apprehensive House of Commons that we are to have a new "alphanumeric" postal code which will stand unchanged for 30 years.

Although the post office has been a sensitive subject for the past 18 months, the announcement brought comparatively philosophic rejoinders from opposition spokesmen. David Orlikow consoled himself with the law of averages. There have been many changes in the department and something, sooner or later, is bound to work.

As an aid to understanding, the post office has issued a communique explaining the new system. It reads:

"The format of the code will be as follows:

ACX AAX
(Forward Sortation area)
(Local Delivery Unit)

Where — "A" is an alphabetic character; "C" is either an alphabetic character or a numeral; "X" is a numeral."

New Miracle

It is difficult to imagine a system more appropriate for a post office which is already at sixes and sevens. Mr. Kierans may at last have stumbled on a justification for Information Canada. The department for years has been scolding people who cannot remember zone numbers. How much will it cost to explain this new miracle of communications to slow learners?

We once had an "alphanumeric" telephone system, although admittedly very much simpler. Bell Canada forced us to abandon it. With the memory of this grim precedent, how can we be sure that the Kierans Reform will stand for the promised 30 years? Recent trends have caused some to doubt that the post office itself can last that long.

According to the hand-out, the new system will be "unique among the postal codes of other countries." Apart from being ungrammatical, it will be distinctively Canadian.

But is this altogether reassuring? Will our uniqueness be taken into due account by persons in other continents? Even with the old and simple method, mail frequently suffered at the hands of post office gremlins. Mr. Kierans has been tormented with such exhibits inside and outside the House of Commons.

Before committing us irrevocably to the new code, Mr. Kierans plans a pilot project in Ottawa in April. The national capital is described in the release as a "test site" probably because explosive side-effects are confidently anticipated by officials. There were earlier guinea pig experiments in Toronto, but these were not, apparently, regarded as official.

The plan is not lacking in audacity, since April is income-tax month and Ottawa is the seat of the national revenue department. Fortunately returns are personalized and may, for that reason, be less readily mislaid than other mail entrusted to the care of post office custodians.

Mr. Kierans' new plan will require earnest study on the part of citizens. The numbers game may appear at first glance deceptively easy to persons who have grasped the format and have been emboldened by their capacity to master an alpha-numeric automobile licence in a matter of weeks. In fact there are all sorts of traps, recognized by the futurologists in their report to the minister.

How to Write It

"We recommend," they say, "that the code always be written with a single space between the two 3-character groups. The code format should not be hyphenated and no use should be made of other symbols or punctuation such as the oblique stroke or colon. Adding a space between elements does not make the code into a 7-character structure."

Why anyone would wish to make it into a 7-character structure, the report does not explain. Presumably the general intention of a writer is to ensure that his mail moves from point A to point B (if Mr. Kierans will permit a loose, old-fashioned, non-alphanumeric description). We now face new hazards, a chance hyphen, an inadvertent oblique stroke, a misplaced single space and it may end up in point C, very probably the dead letter office.

By way of encouragement the post office suggests that in adopting the new system we will be helping others who, for their own reasons, are interested in us. In addition to the promised and exhilarating effects on departmental efficiency (once mailmen get the hang of it, if ever) the change offers additional benefits. As the futurologists explain:

Forgotten Public

"Many LVMS, particularly the direct mailers, have a need for market analyses that correlate their large address files with published statistics. In our opinion, this need would be met by using the postal code as the 'bridge' or link between a user's address files and the statistics based on census data. Also, the direct mailer could be more selective in market research or in reaching particular sectors by linking together certain LDUS and omitting others within the same general area."

Good for the LVMS, the LDUS and the statisticians. But the post office exists primarily for the general public. What is the new system going to demand of us and what, aside from headaches, is it going to assure us? It is bound to arouse enthusiasm on the part of the private consultants since they invented it.

On a first reading of Mr. Kierans' orange-bordered literature, it is not immediately apparent that it will arouse a like degree of enthusiasm in suburbia.

Mr. Orlikow should not count too heavily on the law of averages.

Letters

Too Late for Steam

In reply to the letter written by Mr. K. Showers, headed "Tourist Railway," which states in part—"the CPR shops are still set up to service steam power, some of which is readily available on the Island here . . ."

I would like to point out that since the line was converted to diesel electric operation in 1949, the tools, special servicing facilities and appliances, as well as the steam engines themselves have all been scrapped. Even if steam engines of a suitable type were available, I doubt if there is a manufacturer left in North America today who could supply the specialized parts necessary for the maintenance of this type of locomotive. Another point to be considered is that most of the skilled craftsmen who worked on steam engines are either long retired, or trained to work exclusively on diesels.

If the parties in the various civic centres on the Island were to bend their efforts to persuading the minister of conservation and recreation to set aside and ensure the old west coast lifesaving trail be preserved for inclusion in the new coast park, or equally important, to persuade him to stop the proposed logging of Mount Arrowsmith trail, and press instead for an enlarged provincial park in that area which includes the trail to Mt. Arrowsmith, the mountain itself, and Cathedral Grove (MacMillan Park), they would be accomplishing something of far greater value to visiting tourists and the people of the province than trying to retain a rail service that time and circumstances have made obsolete.
—H. A. Miller.

For Commuters

A rise in bus fares, as we all know, will work a hardship on the poor and blameless; those people who don't contribute to downtown congestion, don't cause traffic accidents, or pollute the air with individual car exhaust fumes. It is not for their benefit we pay for new expensive access routes, street widening — and heavens, a $2 million overpass. Their cars don't occupy those vast godforsaken acres of concrete in suburban and downtown Victoria — they hardly make a dent into the world's dwindling supply of petroleum. In fact they just ain't important or worthy of consideration — in our present way of thinking.

Should we not change our way of thinking? Spend our money on sewage treatment instead of hideous, involved methods of dealing with downtown congestion and traffic snarls caused by commuters?

As a car driver myself I know the only way my habit can be changed is when public transport becomes cheap, frequent and direct, and when private car travel is less tempting.

I doubt if we can rely on the B.C. Hydro to improve matters. The commission is not even based in Victoria and its main interest is electricity and profits. The peculiar or particular interests of the citizens can only be served if the city takes on the headache of running the bus system.

A tax on gas and a heavy tax on land used for private parking lots should discourage the commuter and help pay for the service.

Would it be too far out to suggest the E & N railroad could provide commuter service from Colwood, Langford or beyond? — Monica Oldham, 511 Victoria.

FROM LONDON

By DAVID HUMPHREYS

Worried Britons Take a Look at Crime

A POLICE inspector and a night watchman are shot to death on duty in Yorkshire. The policeman is the ninth to be murdered since capital punishment was abolished four years ago.

The cricket pitches at the famous Lord's Ground resemble concentration camps, surrounded by barbed wire and floodlit at night. The South African tour has been reduced by half.

These developments are enough to disturb an Englishman, to tell him that something in the state is not quite right. No help from the Tories has been needed, although it has been given, to move the debate about crime and punishment from the cricket pitch to the police beat.

The double murder has stirred up the inevitable emotional side. The police wives are picketing the Houses of Parliament, where two months ago capital punishment was abolished forever, after a trial period. Inside, some of the members are having second thoughts. Those who fought for retention have taken some heart.

The nine murders of policemen since abolition compares unfavorably with 28 murdered in the previous 50 years, for instance. But in this field it has already been learned that statistics can be used to help the campaigns of both sides. After the understandable sympathy for the murdered policeman's widow passes, the furore will die down. Abolition will stay.

Alarming Increases

Annual reports of police authorities will continue to be published, as they have recently. The report for the London area supports the view that there is cause for concern. The over-all crime rate rose by 7.5 per cent. Crimes against the person rose by 22.5 per cent. And 58 per cent of those arrested for robbery were under 21: All during the last year.

Although the London police are more than 5,000 men under strength, the crime detection rate is constant or improving. In other words, they are coping with the increased rate which is really the only concern of the government. There may be some cost to morale, however. The chief commissioner said the trend was serious but not catastrophic. In Gloucester, the chief constable complained about deteriorating morale.

Both law authorities and judges are expressing concern in public statements, thus inviting political and public debate.

The issue has two basic aspects: one, whether the law-enforcement agencies have the means to enforce the law as it stands; the other, the prevailing attitudes of society to the law. When judges start talking about attitudes, they invite response. Is society setting the right standards? Is the attitude to crime and criminals responsible for same?

In the course of such a lecture at the opening of assizes in York, Mr. Justice Eveleigh commented: "If it is thought excusable to show violence in demonstrations for a political cause, and if hooliganism in sport can be treated as mere exuberance, there is no wonder that other criminals feel at liberty to use violence for their own selfish ends."

It was an opportunity for Quinton Hogg, the Conservative law-and-order critic, to fire off another fusillade. He invited Prime Minister Wilson to look at the actions of some of the followers: "You cannot dig up somebody else's cricket pitch and expect people not to break into your house . . ." It was not a question of Right or Left but a matter of right or wrong.

Sharp barbs and exhortations were tossed about in both Houses of Parliament. Lord Brooke, a former home secretary, the minister responsible for the police, called for an onslaught on crime as thorough as the preparations for D-Day. Lord O'Neill, the former prime minister of Northern Ireland, offered as his maiden speech the thought that he would now be dead but for a provision of capital punishment for the slaying of policemen, and a sterner attitude in Northern Ireland.

Pay Raise

Finally the government responded. The police would get an interim pay raise well before it was due, to encourage recruitment and stop resignations. A permanent squad of "gang busters" would be established to spot the growth of youth gangs and stop them before they became established powers. Restrictions on recruitment would be lifted. They were imposed in 1967 because of the economic squeeze and have left the government vulnerable to Tory criticism.

Thus, the government has acted to restore morale and improve efficiency so that the law as it stands can be enforced. The police are not agents of the government; they are agents of law. The government has, therefore done its duty in that sphere. Which leaves the attitude of society to the law for the politicians, judges and clerics, indeed all of society, to settle.

From the Times of Feb. 26, 1910.

The second annual report of the Manitoba telephone commissioners was laid on the table of the house yesterday afternoon and showed that the government system had a most successful year. The revenue increased from $648,000 to $788,444 and this in the face of reduced rates. Today there are 25,400 subscribers as compared with 14,000 the last year of Bell control.

Musings of a Loser And Carpet-Bagger

By DOUGLAS FISHER

How does a rejected carpetbagger steal off the scene? Probably it would be wiser to do it without a word.

Last Saturday night I ran third in the contest for the NDP nomination in Selkirk riding. The convention, held in northeast Winnipeg, drew some 850 delegates out of a possible 2,000.

A turkey farmer from near Selkirk town, Nick Penner, led on the first two ballots and then was overtaken by 29-year-old Douglas Rowland, executive assistant to Premier Schreyer and a comparative veteran in working posts of the Manitoba and national NDP.

Mr. Penner has been campaigning since last August, Mr. Rowland since September, and I got into the act in early December after an invitation to run from 70-odd party members of the constituency.

Ex-Conservative

In January, a young Selkirk councillor, Herb Bubowits, entered the fray. Like Mr. Penner, he had been a Conservative until just before the Schreyer victory campaign last June.

There were several amusing ironies in the nomination battle which have national implications, insofar as the by-election on April 13 emerges as a test of both the Trudeau government and the Manitoba New Democrats.

The name Selkirk is a bit of misnomer for the riding as some 62,000 of the 90,000 population live in northeast Winnipeg: There is a rural scatter of about 15,000 mostly working mixed farms; the rest live in the small towns of Selkirk, Gimli, Arborg and Riverton.

In the '58-'62 period the rural area was Diefenbaker country. The present riding was new at the '65 election and it took in much of Winnipeg that had been traditionally CCF-NDP.

The Liberals have not been a major factor, either provincially or federally, in the riding polls in the past 15 years. The present riding includes, in whole four provincial ridings, in part five others, all held now by New Democrats, including those of Premier Schreyer and three other cabinet ministers.

When Mr. Schreyer held the seat there were fewer than 400 party members, mostly in Winnipeg and Selkirk town; then it bloomed to around 800. Since last June, more than 1,200 new members have been added, mostly in the farm areas by Penner and Dubowits.

For Saturday, the bluntest equation was that half the possible voters lived outside Winnipeg although the city area represented over two-thirds of the population.

This meant that Rowland and I, who were obviously stronger candidates in the city, were up against a potential winner in Penner if he could get all the members out whom he'd signed up, plus the old members who were behind him because of backing from Howard Pawley, a cabinet minister from Selkirk.

FISHER

The story of the nomination at its simplest was that Penner failed to get enough first-ballot supporters out to take the big lead he needed to stop the merging of the city members behind the leading city candidate.

Better Organized

Why did Rowland lead me on the first ballot with city votes? Better organization, using more clever, fighting tactics was obvious.

More explanatory: He was better able to exploit the fact I was an outsider with the Winnipeg membership than had seemed possible, adding to this a theme hammered home by his canvassers that I was anti-labor, a charge taken with seriousness in a heavy trade union area.

In addition, Mr. Rowland had the resources open to him from Winnipeg MPPs, executive assistants in minister's offices and the provincial offices, all of whom knew him favorably as a diligent, considerate, key figure in both the Schreyer campaign and government.

But he had more to work with than this, a factor that I and my backers underestimated and which indicates both that Rowland should take the by-election and the depth of Manitoba rejection of the Trudeau government.

These people wanted no Easterner, no one from perfidious Ottawa as their voice of grievance in Parliament. It's such a frustrating irony for someone so dubious about Trudeau as the country's leader, to be identified in a vague but real way with him and with his patronizing of the West.

Anti-East Feeling

I, who should know better, and my loyal band of friends, were outsmarted at every turn, a good omen for an able Rowland campaign in the by-election. There are a number of morals I can draw from it all personally, one of them salving my lack of acumen, especially in misreading both anti-Eastern feeling and the encouragement to run the premier had given me privately.

The Liberals have nominated a PR man from John Munro's staff in Ottawa who did sportscasting for CBC Winnipeg for several years. Phil Reimer is green politically, but young, handsome, friendly, well-spoken and not least of Mennonite background, a credit in Winnipeg northeast.

The Tories are about to put up a former Diefenbaker aide, red-haired Jerry Halsam, a hot-line host on the biggest audience station in Manitoba.

Thus all three candidates are in their late 20s, and two of them are pros at speaking for the electronic media.

Doug Rowland is much more stiff and uneven as a platform performer, but he's much better informed than his rivals about the issues and structure of politics.

And as I've said, respectfully, he's got quite an organization. As for me, I'm a columnist, with an NDP membership in Ontario, and minute political aspirations.

Russia's Outspoken General Silenced By Criticism-Sensitive Hierarchy

By PETER REDDAWAY
The Listener

The news that General Grigorenko has been declared officially mad comes seven months after his arrest.

During this time Soviet detectives have interrogated scores of people about his case, while he himself, at the age of 62, has sat in solitary confinement, denied even one visit from family or friends.

At first, through the long, hot summer of Soviet Central Asia, it was a cell in the Tashkent jail. Since late October it has been the ill-famed Serbsky Institute of Forensic Psychiatry in Moscow.

●

If one reads the stream of "underground" Soviet documents now reaching the outside world — many of them by or about Grigorenko — then it becomes clear that this tall soldier is a sort of father figure to the Soviet civil rights movement.

The Crimean Tatars, whom he had strongly defended, began to picket the Tashkent goal, demanded his release. In Moscow 55 signatures were collected in one day on an appeal in his defence.

The Action Group for the Defence of Civil Rights in the Soviet Union raised his case in two of the three appeals which they have sent to U Thant. Individual protests streamed in from various parts of the Soviet Union.

Essays about Grigorenko's life and works multiplied, including one by his wife, another by a friend, Boris Tsukerman, and a third by the Christian socialist Anatoli Levitin, himself to be arrested in September. Then on June 6 there was a demonstration by five Tatars on Moscow's Mayakovsky Square.

Tsukerman's long essay is full of fascinating new details about Grigorenko's life. Born into a peasant family in the Ukraine, he joined the party in 1927, was trained at some of the best military academies, reached the Sudeten lands at the end of the war, in which he was twice seriously wounded, and received the Order of Lenin, four other orders and five medals. After the war he worked in the Frunze Military Academy — the Soviet Sandhurst — as head, first, of the research department, then of the cybernetics department.

In 1961 Grigorenko spoke up against the burgeoning cult of Khrushchev's personality. Reprimanded and transferred to the Ussuli River area in the Far East, he formed a discussion group in 1963 called the Action Group for the Revival of Leninism.

On Feb. 1, 1964, the group was arrested: to avoid a full-scale trial — which is the whole point of these manoeuvres — Grigorenko was declared insane and put in a prison psychiatric hospital in Leningrad.

●

In Tsukerman's gently ironic words: "The general's illness was, apparently, extremely dangerous to those around him: he was not allowed to meet the lawyer appointed to defend him, nor to participate in the investigation of his own case.

Neither the general nor his relatives ever even saw the verdict. After giving some examples of how "the people in power could not of course play convincingly their role of believing the general mad," Tsukerman continues: "Meanwhile the general made a successful recovery. And here the doctor in charge of him must be given his due: he fortunately gave the patient no treatment (if only it were always so in such cases!)."

But the decisive factor in Grigorenko's release was the visit he eventually received from the Army's chief psychiatrist: "In the Army people rarely go mad for political reasons, and so the Army's psychiatric service is poorly prepared for such situations. This explains how the post of chief psychiatrist could be occupied by an honest man." Grigorenko left hospital on April 23, 1965.

At this stage Grigorenko embarked on his better-known career as attender of political trials, writer of open letters and denouncer of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia.

●

One of his last open letters, written in March and reported to have especially angered the authorities, recently reached the West. It is addressed to the election officials of the constituency where he lived in Moscow:

"Not wanting to cause the canvassers unnecessary trouble, I inform you that I will not come to the voting booth.

"My reasons:

"1. We do not have elections. We have voting for the one and only candidate presented by those who today hold power. Whether people come and vote or not, this single candidate will be 'elected.' Consequently the elections are a hollow comedy, necessary to those who hold power so that they can demonstrate to the outside world that the whole people supports them. I don't want to take part in any comedies. So I'll go and vote only when my vote starts to mean something.

●

"2. Our deputies possess no real power and not even the right to vote. They are permitted to speak only in order to approve the policies and practical activity of a carefully co-ordinated group of top rulers. In the whole period that the present Constitution has been in force there has been no occasion when any of the deputies at any level has spoken out against the arbitrariness of the authorities. And of course there was a time when tens of millions of completely innocent people were destroyed, including the overwhelming majority of the deputies 'elected' by the people.

KHRUSHCHEV

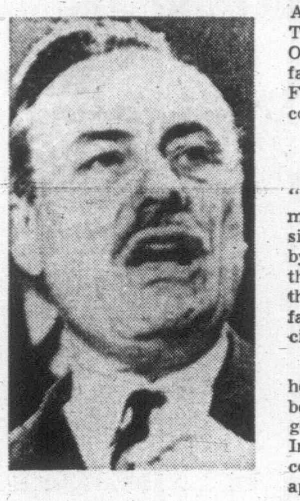
"The deputies' lack of rights is shown also by my own experience. In 1964 I was arrested by the organs of the KGB only because I called for the restoration of Leninist norms in party and state life. They decided not to try me, evidently fearing the truth I might speak at a trial.

"They therefore hid me away in a prison-mental hospital, dismissed me from the Army and demoted me from general to private. My appeals to the government and the organs of justice received no reply. Nor did a single deputy reply. And I had appealed to all the deputies of the USSR Supreme Soviet, including those for whom I had voted.

"Now judge for yourselves whether I can participate in an electoral comedy the aim of which is to express trust in a government trying to perpetuate its power for ever by the methods of arbitrariness."

CALLAGHAN



POWELL

Who Speaks for U.K.?

By ANTHONY LEWIS

LONDON — In Nairobi one recent evening a young lawyer spoke of his feelings toward England.

In most respects he was the characteristic product of an elitist English education: a First at Oxford, a prestige-laden fellowship, a brilliant passage through the bar examinations.

But his parents were Indian and he was born in Kenya. "I shall not go back unless I must," he said. "The last two times I went on a visit, I was treated at London Airport as if I were a criminal — put in a room, questioned for hours by immigration officers about why I wanted to enter the country. But I still do not believe that those people and their racialist policy are the authentic voice of England."

★

If he had been in the House of Commons the other day to hear a brief discussion on the Asians in East Africa, that young man might have been left with fewer illusions about the intrinsic nobility of the English on racial matters.

He might have heard the authentic voice of England in the words of Charles Pannell, Labor member for Leeds West: "This country should not be at the mercy of unscrupulous people abroad, or people careless of the habits of this country, who can impose themselves upon us."

★

Those unscrupulous foreigners to whom Mr. Pannell referred are British subjects, holders of British passports, whom a British government specifically invited to retain their British nationality when the East African colonies became independent. Their disability is the fact that they are light brown in color.

Two years ago, in panic at public fears aroused by the racist speeches of Enoch Powell, the Labor government rushed through a bill to keep this particular group of British subjects out of Britain.

They were to be admitted only if heads of families had special vouchers, which would be issued at the rate of 1,500 a year. At the time, Home Secretary James Callaghan said that if "a man was thrown out of work and ejected from" Kenya or Uganda, "we shall have to take him."

Since then, Kenya has intensified its economic pressure against resident Asians, the government has withdrawn trading licences from many of the traditional Indian storekeepers and refused to renew thousands of work permits.

Mr. Callaghan's humanitarian promise of two years ago has not applied to these people — only to those who have been physically expelled from the East African countries. The result has been to create a class of destitute people looking for somewhere to live.

In Kenya alone, 10,000 Asian heads of family have applied for British entry vouchers—a queue that Britain will take nearly seven years to deal with at the present rate.

Now Mr. Callaghan is not a cruel man by nature; indeed he breathes geniality. He is just a practical politician. In taking so heartless a position he has the evident support of a cabinet majority who fear a political backlash from any action that Mr. Powell or other extremists could describe as increasing colored immigration.

★

Still, one wonders about the young Asian lawyer with the Oxonian voice in Nairobi. Can it really be in Britain's interest to undermine its historical reputation for human decency?

And even in domestic terms, if U.S. experience is a guide, temporizing with racial prejudice while resentments grow is not a recipe for tranquility.

Little Hope for Lobster in B.C.

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL

In many parts of the world there are crustaceans called lobsters but the several species found in the north Atlantic were the first to be described and consequently they are often considered to be the "true" lobsters.

These are the ones with well developed pincers or claws — structures which are lacking in so-called spiny lobsters and similar lobster-like creatures from other areas.

★ ★ ★

Lobsters are found both in Europe and in North America. In the Old World they frequent rocky coastal areas from the Mediterranean north to Norway and including the British Isles. The American lobster, the one now introduced to our coast, normally ranges from Cape Cod to Labrador with the centre of abundance in Maine and the Maritimes. It seems to thrive best where water temperatures are consistently low.

The lobster prefers hard bottoms where numerous carverns and crevices provide shelter and where food to its liking is abundant and easily procured. It feeds on fishes, both captured alive or found recently dead, and upon claims and a variety of other invertebrates. A certain amount of vegetable matter is also included in the diet.

The lobster is a highly desirable sea food and the demand for it has been great — so much so that now natural populations have been greatly reduced by over-fishing and the cost to the consumer has risen to an all-time high. Possibly because of this situation the Fisheries Research Board of Canada decided some years ago to attempt once again to introduce this crustacean to the Pacific coast.

The idea of establishing lobsters in British Columbia is not new. Introduction was first attempted as early as 1896 when a few hundred specimens were released near Nanaimo. Presumably none was seen again because in 1905 many hundreds more were released over a wider area including Burrard Inlet, Sechelt, Gambier Island, Bowen Island, False Narrows and Nanoose Bay and a few years later a further lot of about 1,000 was planted in Sooke Harbour.

★ ★ ★

Since none of these attempts succeeded no further introductions were made until 1946 when more lobsters were brought to the Pacific Coast and some of these were released in a natural lagoon where they could be kept under surveillance. Since the crustaceans were not confined they soon began to disperse; three lobsters were still present in 1948 when observations ceased.

Other subsequent experiments proved that adult lobsters could be kept successfully in confinement on this coast and that they would even spawn in this foreign environment. Consequently a few years ago the Fisheries Research Board launched a well-planned program at Useless Inlet in Barkley Sound in one more attempt to introduce this species to the Pacific coast.

During the latest experiment lobsters have been hatched and reared to a moderate size and both young and adults have been released in the local area. Numbers of them have managed to survive so far but it is too early to predict the final outcome of this introduction.

★ ★ ★

In the opinion of many biologists the chances of success are not great. There is no question about the ability of the lobster to adapt to the slightly different conditions of temperature and salinity presented by Pacific coastal water but the extensive rocky bottom so necessary to its survival is lacking.

Except for isolated patches and narrow strips of hard bottom in some areas our shores tend to fall off rapidly into relatively deep water with sand or mud bottom, not at all hospitable to lobsters.

★ ★ ★

Our local predators, too, may prove to be insurmountable hazards. Mink and otter have already decimated the ranks of those lobsters released so far and there is no assurance that octopuses, wolf-eels, seals and other carnivores will not help exterminate the remainder. Even if some survive to breed the free-swimming larvae will be most fortunate indeed if they are not carried to even less favorable areas by off-shore currents.

Desirable as the lobster is as a source of food it still seems eminently more practical to foster their production on their home grounds and to import them as required rather than waste funds in fruitless attempts to establish them in a foreign and unsuitable environment.

FEDERAL Fisheries Minister Jack Davis holds transplanted lobster while getting report on progress of Barkley Sound experiment from project head Dr. Ray Ghelardi.

Parkland Use for Road Hit

Directors of the Captial Regional District board expressed alarm Wednesday that parkland between the Patricia Bay Highway and Elk Lake will be used for road expansion.

Survey stakes have appeared on the east side of the lake between the Black Swan and Cordova Bay Road where the highways department is planning to widen the highway.

The board agreed that any highway expansion should take place by acquisition of property on the other side of the highway, away from Elk-Beaver Lake regional park.

A letter from Joseph Barber-Starkey, 5062 Santa Clara, said he observed the survey stakes "with great dismay" along the waters' edge.

"The loss of the growth in this area would destroy the whole beauty of the east side of the lake as the giant cottonwood trees are quite irreplaceable.

"As there is ample property available for widening on the east side of the highway, may I implore you to make every effort to avoid destruction of a delightful swimming and picnic area," he said.

Board director and Victoria Ald. Cecil Parrott said he had been assured when he spoke to Highways Minister Black last year that no property would be taken on the shore side of the highway.

Chairman and Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said "we are not against four lanes" but there is private property east of the highway for road expansion rather than to the west in the park.

Problems, particularly financing, of sewerage systems in View Royal and Central Saanich were passed on to the sewer committee. Both areas voted against sewers last December.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, senior medical health officer, asked Health Minister Loffmark in a letter to use his influence as a member of the Pollution Control Board "so that an order may be issued to the corporation of the District of Central Saanich requiring construction of a sewerage system."

(Central Saanich property owners are expected to vote again on the issue this June).

For View Royal, he informed the local fire trustees they have powers covering sewerage system installation and operation and they should take action under the Water Act.

But a letter from R. G. Pearce, chairman of the fire trustees, said "as we interpret it," the Water Act does not give power to take action on sewers, only to put the issue before the public.

"The situation here today is the result of the lack of enforcement of pollution controls and the proper administration of zoning," he said.

* * *

Langford director Earl Pallister agreed, and said "we're 10 years behind in controls."

View Royal director Al Beasley said people realize they have got to have sewers but shy away at a cost of $12 a month.

"We have to work out a better cost-sharing arrangement then it will probably go through," he said.

"How," asked chairman Curtis.

"That's pretty difficult," replied Beasley.

Victoria director Parrott said "if we say people can't pay for it we'll wait until it's never done. It's not getting any cheaper."

A move by Victoria city to have fund raising organizations regulated by the regional district met with little favor, particularly from Victoria directors.

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock said it is unnecessary and Parrott agreed. The third Victoria director, Ald. Percy Frampton, said he also agreed "but as it was passed by council I go along."

Oak Bay director, Mayor Frances Elford, also thought it unnecessary and it was finally referred to the intermunicipal committee with the recommendation it be passed on to the Community Council.

* * *

The board agreed to ask the provincial government to allow the ex-Colwood race track acquisition to be put to a second vote in Metchosin. Residents there narrowly defeated acquisition of the 77-acre park, but Colwood and Langford voted in favor and the measure is proceeding.

* * *

Metchosin director Ken Rainey felt there is a good chance of a favorable vote this time.

The board approved a request from Saanich that the region consider the possibility of establishing disposal grounds for fill and other solid wastes from private and public building projects.

Draft letters patent to accomplish this are being prepared and will be considered at the next meeting of the sewer committee.

WINTER SPORT?

U.S. Watches 'Trudeau Nationalism'

WASHINGTON (CP) — An unusual flurry of journalistic interest in Washington-Ottawa relations had developed in U.S. newspapers recently with concern centred on the Arctic, U.S. foreign policy ond what one headline-writer terms "Trudeau nationalism."

A story from Ottawa credited to the Washington Post foreign service says Canadian opposition to U.S. policies "appears to be growing more outspoken on such issues as Cuba, the military draft and Arctic sovereignty as direct criticism of Vietnam policy recedes."

The story adds, however, that "plucking the eagles feathers is an old winter sport among some Canadian publications and there is nothing about the present spate of criticism to suggest that it is very serious."

Meanwhile, Jay Walz, veteran Ottawa correspondent for the New York Times, writes that "there is a certain amount of dissatisfaction in Canadian circles over the failure of President Nixon to mention Canada in his review of foreign affairs" last Wednesday.

PLANNING TALKS TO BE SECRET

New advisory planning commissions to serve the unorganized areas of southern Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands will meet secretly.

Their recommendations will be kept secret until they reach the planning committee of the Capital Regional District board or the board itself. Public hearings could also be scheduled to allow residents to air their views.

The advisory planning commissions will be set up in Sooke; Langford, Colwood, Metchosin, View Royal; Salt Spring Island; and the Outer Gulf Islands.

The board directors Wednesday approved a bylaw to accomplish this, which stated in one part "recommendations of the commissions shall not be made public or disclosed to any unauthorized person before such recommendations have been considered by the board or its planning committee."

Director M. H. Holmes of Salt Spring said it is unfortunate to cut off publicity because public support is necessary in planning. He had "serious reservations" about secret meetings.

Board chairman, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, said the same pattern is followed in municipalities in B.C. where it "works well."

Foreign Policy White Paper Still Like a Fuzzy Picture

By JACK BEST

OTTAWA (CP) — Work on the government's long-heralded white paper on Canadian foreign policy is moving along but it has not reached the point where anyone knows for sure when it will see the light of day.

Informed sources say it's uncertain at the moment whether there will be one white paper or six white papers.

Another possibility: one white paper and five appendices.

This slightly fuzzy picture results from the fact that the foreign policy review undertaken shortly after Prime Minister Trudeau took office has encompassed five distinctive areas of policy in addition to the study of general principles.

They are: Latin America, Europe, the United Nations, international development aid, and the Pacific. Each has been exhaustively studied by interdepartmental committees, whose basic work now has been largely completed.

FORM UNCERTAIN

The general policy statement, when it comes, will owe a lot to the spade work done by these various committees. But whether their printed reports are to have a life of their own, or form part of the over-all statement of principles, is a question not yet settled.

The government has promised to produce the white paper for the present session of Parliament, expected to end sometime this summer.

Its exact timing apparently depends on the speed with which the cabinet acts upon material sent up to it by a small committee of officials. It could conceivably come before Easter.

NOT SUGGESTIONS

In addition to the external affairs department, other departments having a direct interest in foreign policy—such as trade and commerce and defence—have made inputs into the policy-making process.

An informed source was careful not to use the word recommendations in referring to the material being placed before cabinet ministers. Instead he used the phrase "topics of discussion."

It is understood that heavy emphasis is being placed on outlining optional lines of policy, with the officials generally not committing themselves to one line or another.

This may be a reaction to the experience of last year when external affairs officials made recommendations to the cabinet which, it is believed, called for a generally unchanged Canadian policy towards NATO.

Rejecting the advice, Prime Minister Trudeau's cabinet decided instead on a drastic reduction of Canada's military contribution to NATO and a reorientation of Canadian defence policy towards North America.

Labor Agrees To Talks On Wage Hold

By IAN PORTER

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Labor Congress will continue discussions with the federal prices and incomes commission about anti-inflation tactics despite the lack of progress.

A spokesman for the CLC said here more informal meetings will be held although no dates have been set.

Monday's meeting was described by CLC president Donald MacDonald as an "informal get-together at which there was an exchange of views."

There was, however, no change in the CLC response to the commission's plea for voluntary restraints on wage demands. Mr. MacDonald called the proposed policy "unworkable and unjust."

Two weeks ago the commission won an agreement in a conference with business leaders that price increases this year will be kept at a lower level than cost increases.

PREMIERS IN ACCORD

At a federal-provincial conference last week, premiers agreed on the need to hold down taxes and spending and to impose sanctions on industries that increase prices without adequate justification.

Monday was originally scheduled as the day for the annual meeting between the federal cabinet and the CLC at which the congress would present a memorandum on social, economic, labor and human rights policy. At the request of the government, the meeting has been postponed to March 23.

Congress officials say they believe the government asked for the delay in hopes the results of the meetings with business and the provinces will sink into labor's thinking.

In response, the spokesman said, the CLC has at least gone farther than it's Quebec-based rival, the Confederation of National Trade Unions, which has already released its brief to the government and demanded a shift in economic policy to encourage greater employment.

"The CNTU are saying they will be thinking the same thing in a month as they do now. We're at least ready to listen," the CLC official said.

Labor feels wage restraints don't make sense in many parts of Canada and in most Canadian industries.

CULTURAL GENOCIDE THEME OF CAMPAIGN

Pro-Canada Scholars Draw Sparse Audience at Uvic

By BOB MITCHELL

For about a year and a half the news media have portrayed Robin Matthews and James Steele as wild-eyed chauvinists engaged in a witch-hunt against foreign scholars in Canadian universitites.

As they sauntered off their plane at Victoria International Airport Wednesday they looked more like a couple of mild-mannered English professors headed for an uneventful manuscript conference.

They are, in fact, English professors from Carleton University.

Matthews, 38, was wearing a black three-piece suit. He's a native of Powell River, but he now teaches a Canadian literature course at the Ottawa campus.

UNPOPULAR

Steele, 36, is a 17th century specialist who spent part of his childhood at Ucluelet. He was still wearing his overshoes as he walked across the sun-drenched tarmac, as if he half expected to be greeted by a blizzard.

They are fast becoming the most unpopular scholars in Canadian university circles.

Since 1968 the names Matthews and Steele have become synonomous with their most controversial proposal: that legislation be enacted to ensure two-thirds of the faculty members of every university be Canadian.

They've been accused of hunting for an American under every fallen maple leaf.

SMALL TURNOUT

Only a handful of students and faculty members came to listen to and argue with the two Carleton professors at the University of Victoria Wednesday afternoon.

It's reading week at Uvic, there are no classes, so many of the students who would have attended are skiing at Whistler Mountain or relaxing in California . . .

Of the 30 people who did show up, some walked out. Others, perhaps doubtful or confused or convinced, stayed on for 3½ hours.

The theme of the campaign waged by Matthews and Steele during the last 18 months is that Canadian universities, by their hiring policies, are commiting cultural genocide.

CANADIAN MINORITY

During the last decade, they say, rapid expansion of universities has resulted in hiring of a majority of non-Canadian faculty members, most of them American.

In 1961-62 three-quarters of the faculty members were Canadian. By 1968-69 Canadians had become a minority (49 per cent) in their own universities.

"The struggle for the Canadian university is the struggle for Canada," Matthews said.

In an era of instant communication universities produce the dominant political and social attitudes.

If the dominant political and social attitudes being disseminated in Canadian universities are American, said Matthews, then Canadian students are being colonized (however benevolently) by U.S. culture.

"It is not necessarily a conspiracy," said Matthews, "it is a fact, and, I would suggest, demonstrable."

CULTURAL

So far as Steele is concerned the universities, and by extension the whole education system are now in a state of cultural servitude to Canada's neighbour to the south.

York University students recently surveyed textbooks in 15 humanities and social science courses. They found that of 259 texts only five were written by Canadians, and of the five two were by Marshall McLuhan on subjects that did not have a Canadian context.

Just prior to coming west this week Steele checked with the Department of Manpower and Immigration on the influx of foreign scholars last year.

INFLUX

He was told during the first nine months of 1969 1,796 non-Canadian academics had come to Canada, as compared with 1,500 during 1968.

A large proportion of non-Canadians in the universities means the kind of research being done is not related to Canadian problems, Steele said.

"If we fail to study our own society then not only are we being anti-academic, we are also being unscientific.

"If the students in the universities are not getting information about Canada then the students in the secondary schools are also going to be affected."

RELEVANCE

One of the requirements of hiring non-Canadian faculty members would be passing some kind of test of their knowledge of Canadian material, particularly where it relates to their own discipline, Matthews said.

Foreign teachers' ignorance of Canadian history, institutions, government and geography he described as "downright obstructive."

COSMOPOLITAN

"Every scholar is asked questions by students about the relevance of his material to the national experience."

Mathews said the fact of being a Canadian, either by birth or citizenship, should be considered a qualification.

Familiarity with Canada has not been given much value by universities when they screen applicants for teaching positions, he said.

But neither could he condone ignorance by Canadians of their own country:

"One has to face in Canda Canadian colonial-mindedness.

"Canadians are relatively cosmopolitan — Canadians generally know more about the United States than they do about Canada.

"Our news media are invaded by American thought, our periodical literature is raped by American influence, and it has the support of the government."

Matthews and Steele have proposed a mandatory two-thirds Canadian faculty in order to gurantee a Canadian viewpoint in the universities.

In no other country in the world — except Australia — can foreign scholars get permanent teaching positions. why should it take place in Canada if it means Canadians are rejected?

Strongest argument against the two-thirds proposal has been that scholarship is international.

Steele singled out what he called the "fairytale of the community of scholars." He said it is a myth that enables universities to continue to discriminate against Canadian scholars.

"Only in Canada may a scholar of any nationality compete on a fair basis with Canadian citizens.

NO CONTROLS

"Very often the Canadian who has just completed training would be competing with a scholar who has several years' behind him."

At present, he said, some 205,000 students are working toward Ph.D.'s in U.S. graduate schools.

The comparable figure for Canada is only 5,000. The spillover of American Ph.D.'s into Canada has already begun, but there are no controls to guarantee Canadian scholars can get teaching positions in their own country.

Official position of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada and the Canadian Association of University Teachers has been that "scholarship is international," said Steele.

He singled out the University of Victoria as the only one in Canada yet to announce a policy of hiring qualified Canadians whenever possible to fill new or vacant positions.

Matthews pointed out American qualifications have begun to creep into Canadian universities as criterion for judging scholarship here.

PARANOIA

"Ph.D. paranoia" was one example.

"Sometimes the Ph.D. is a useful qualification, often it is not.

"Northrop Frye does not have a Ph.D. and, "he added with a grin, "neither does Melville Watkins."

Matthews and Steele are not concerned with driving the non-Canadian teachers out of the universities.

But they come down heavily on the university administrations for failing to plan ahead for the needs of graduate schools to produce home-grown academics to staff the new social science and humanities courses.

"If we have produced only five Ph.D. sociologists in the last decade then it is a burning indictment of the chairmen of our sociology departments," said Matthews.

But, he pointed out, the CAUT (the professors' trade union) and the AUCC (university presidents) do not recognize Americanization as a problem.

Familiarity with Canada has not been given much value by universities when they screen applicants for teaching positions, he said.

But neither could he condone ignorance by Canadians of their own country:

"One has to face in Canda Canadian colonial-mindedness.

"Canadians are relatively cosmopolitan — Canadians generally know more about the United States than they do about Canada.

"Our news media are invaded by American thought, our periodical literature is raped by American influence, and it has the support of the government."

Matthews and Steele have proposed a mandatory two-thirds Canadian faculty in order to gurantee a Canadian viewpoint in the universities.

In no other country in the world — except Australia — can foreign scholars get permanent teaching positions. why should it take place in Canada if it means Canadians are rejected?

Strongest argument against the two-thirds proposal has been that scholarship is international.

Steele singled out what he called the "fairytale of the community of scholars." He said it is a myth that enables universities to continue to discriminate against Canadian scholars.

"Only in Canada may a scholar of any nationality compete on a fair basis with Canadian citizens.

NO CONTROLS

"Very often the Canadian who has just completed training would be competing with a scholar who has several years behind him."

At present, he said, some 205,000 students are working toward Ph.D.'s in U.S. graduate schools.

The comparable figure for Canada is only 5,000. The spillover of American Ph.D.'s into Canada has already begun, but there are no controls to guarantee Canadian scholars can get teaching positions in their own country.

Official position of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada and the Canadian Association of University Teachers has been that "scholarship is international," said Steele.

He singled out the University of Victoria as the only one in Canada yet to announce a policy of hiring qualified Canadians whenever possible to fill new or vacant positions.

Matthews pointed out American qualifications have begun to creep into Canadian universities as criterion for judging scholarship here.

PARANOIA

"Ph.D. paranoia" was one example.

"Sometimes the Ph.D. is a useful qualification, often it is not.

"Northrop Frye does not have a Ph.D. and, "he added with a grin, "neither does Melville Watkins."

Matthews and Steele are not concerned with driving the non-Canadian teachers out of the universities.

But they come down heavily on the university administrations for failing to plan ahead for the needs of graduate schools to produce home-grown academics to staff the new social science and humanities courses.

"If we have produced only five Ph.D. sociologists in the last decade then it is a burning indictment of the chairmen of our sociology departments," said Matthews.

But, he pointed out, the CAUT (the professors' trade union) and the AUCC (university presidents) do not recognize Americanization as a problem.

The stock market rally at New York collapsed today after a brief fling in late trading on Wednesday.

The quick turn-around today, Wall Street analysts said, was a result of fading hopes of investors that the move by the small Philadelphia bank in cutting its prime interest rate would be followed by the major banks.

Toronto was influenced by Wall Street and prices also suffered a decline. Trading results were delayed through a two-hour breakdown by the exchange's computer.

AT TORONTO, in industrials, Falconbridge was up 1 to 178½, Dustbane ¾ to 11½, Acres ¾ to 17½ and Inco ½ to 48.

Labatt was down 1 to 28¾, Gulf Canada ⅞ to 17⅝, Bow Valley ⅞ to 23 and Shaw Pipe [illegible] 13.

Roman was up 3 to 14 and Denison 2¾ to 42¾. Placer slipped ⅝ to 18⅝.

Canadian Homestead lost ⅝ to 12 and Central-Del Rio ½ to 12¾. Scurry gained 1 to 26.

AT NEW YORK, steels, motors, aircrafts, non-ferrous metals, chemicals, oils and drugs were mostly lower.

Losses among the savings and loans, which would stand to benefit from lower interest rates, included Imperial 1½ to 12½, Financial Federation 2⅛ to 20⅜, Far Western Financial 1⅜ to 16⅜, and Great Western Financial 1⅜ to 22⅝.

AT MONTREAL all sectors of the stock market declined in light trading today. Banks led losses.

The Royal Bank was off ⅞ to 22⅞ while the Toronto Dominion was unchanged at 22½.

Among industrials, Velcro Industries was down 1½ to 28, Labatt 1⅜ to 28½ and Simpsons-Sears ⅝ to 18⅜.

In senior mines and oils, Falconbridge gained 1½ to 178 and Inco ¼ to 47⅝. Imperial Oil slipped ¼ to 20½.

AT LONDON, prices declined slightly today in quiet trading on the stock exchange. The Wall Street upswing had no effect in London, as it was believed that the rally would not sustain itself.

Cunard was a gainer but the trend was downward, with falls in ICI, Beechams, Unilever and Rank.

Among Canadians, Consolidated Bathurst added 2 points while Pacific Pete, Inco, Power Corp., Alcan, Algoma and Central Del Rio were others to firm. Banks were quiet.

Amsai, up 5 points, led United States issues higher, with GM, Penn Central, Ford, Chrysler, Woolworth and United States Steel also firmer.

AT VANCOUVER, prices were generally down in light trading as the stock exchange reported a volume of 765,274 shares to 11 a.m.

In the industrials Gulf Oil of Canada traded 1,200 shares and was unchanged at $17.50. John Labatts preferred "A" traded 1,000 shares and was unchanged at $28.37. Northwest Life Financial was up .45 at $3.70 after a turnover of 3,200 shares.

In the oils United Bata Resources was down .15 at $3.00 after trading 4,400 shares. Plains Petroleums was down .01 at .39 on a turnover of 5,000 shares and Share Oil was down .01 at .23 on 4,600 shares.

In the mines Alice Lake traded 28,000 and was up .04 at .86. Coast Silver was unchanged at .90 after trading 25,000 shares. Kopan Development traded 27,500 shares and was down .03 at .23.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Commission house liquidation pressure in the March rapeseed future continued at the close of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, causing declines of up to 14 cents.

Liquidation selling spilled over into the May future which also posted marginal losses, while deferred futures were steady near previous close levels.

Flax was steady in moderate trading. Offers from a U.S. house were taken by commission houses.

Oats and barley were steady near previous close levels in a moderate domestic shipper trade for eastern feeders.

Rye was steady in light trade that was most inter-month spreading.

Lakehead prices for Class Two and IGA wheat all were unchanged.

Interest Cut Discounted

NEW YORK (AP) — Spokesmen for big banks generally doubt the cut in the prime interest rate to 8 from 8½ per cent by Philadelphia's little Lincoln National Bank is likely to spread soon.

But New York stock market investors grabbed Wednesday at the news—half an hour before the close—as an indication that tight money policies might be ready for a change. A flood of trading sent the Dow Jones industrial average rocketing to a 13.86-point gain, closing at 768.2.8

The prolonged slump has been blamed widely on tight money and credit policies instigated by the Federal Reserve Board to fight inflation and cool the economy.

Banks have progressively increased the prime rate—the rate to their biggest customers from 6¼ per cent as recently as December, 1968, to the historic high of 8½ per cent.

Norman Denny, president of Lincoln National, said the bank lowered its prime rate, effective March 1, "because we don't want the economy of the Delaware Valley to suffer."

In an interview, he said the stock market reaction "shows the frustration of the investor, that he was waiting for some sign, some indication of better times."

"We thought there was a depression on the horizon. We wanted to give the businessmen confidence to move forward rather than retrench."

Many bankers said they doubted the move by Lincoln National—a comparatively small bank with $50,000,000 in assets—will lead to immediate widespread drop in the prime rate at other banks.

"I don't think they'll come down at the moment," said William Butler, vice-president of Chase Manhattan Bank in New York, in a typical comment.

A spokesman for Wells Fargo Bank in San Francisco said the decrease is not likely to spread now because loan demand remains too strong and banks need more liquidity before a reduction is possible.

BUSINESS and FINANCE

By G. S. Kent

Mac-Bloedel

MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., today reported earnings for 1969 of $42.55 million.

Previous best was $42.46 in 1966.

Per-share net earnings for 1969 equalled $2.04 a share, up from $1.86 in 1968, when net earnings totalled $38.79 million.

J. V. Clyne, chairman, said in an interim report to shareholders that 1969 earnings were "disappointing" and said a sharp reduction in lumber prices last spring, coupled with a longshoremen's strike later in the year, kept earnings from reaching expectations.

"Were it not for profit improvements stemming from pulp and paper operations . . . the impact would have been even greater," Clyne said.

Susquehanna

Broadening of the plastic pipe market is reflected with establishment of a new Australian company to manufacture and distribute fittings in the Antipodes.

A. C. I Sloane Pty. Ltd. is formed by joint interests of the Susquehanna Corp., Virgina, and Australian Consolidated Industries Ltd., and is comparable to CANPLAS Industries Ltd., which is making plastic fittings in Canada under license from R. and G. Sloane Manufacturing Co. Inc. Susquehanna has 50 per cent interest in both firms.

Pacific Asbestos

Pacific Asbestos Ltd is to spend $20.4 million in Australia developing absestos deposits near Tamworth, about 280 miles north of Sydney. Work on plant construction is to start in two months.

Proven deposits of asbestos are estimated at 27 million tons, with a potential of 90 million tons.

The company seeks contracts with Japanese interests for the export of $30 million worth of asbestos fibre over five years from 1971.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Watch Those Medical Expenses

(This is a service of the Times and of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia).

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, C.A.

The time has come the tax act says to talk of many things, of medical bills, and pension plans, and salaries, and fringe.

The distinction between taxation and Lewis Carroll's delightful humor is sometimes little more than a change of wording and often the peculiar sense of the ridiculous appears in both.

This year there is a new difficulty in the treatment of medical expenses.

In prior yars all medical expenses could be accounted for in a taxpayer's deduction calculation whether he paid the expense directly himself or had it paid for him by a medical insurance plan. Now some taxpayers are covered by provincial government medical care insurance plans, and expenses paid by such provincial government plans, or any authorized agent of such plans, are not allowed as deductible expenses.

EXTRA OUTLAY

Some confusion will arise because the authorized agents for provincial medical plans may, in some areas, also provide extended medical coverage outside the provincial plans. It is the expenses covered and paid for by the provincial plans, whether directly or through an agent, which are not allowed, but extra expenses paid by some other insurance plan are still allowable.

To add to the problem the provincial plans do not cover all provinces and for those provinces that are covered the starting times vary.

The provinces of New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island, and Quebec did not have such plans in effect in 1969 therefore the rules for taxpayers in those provinces remain unchanged.

For the other seven provinces the starting dates of the provincial medical plans are:

B.C. and Saskatchewan — January 1, 1969.

Manitoba, Nova Scotia, and Newfoundland — April 1, 1969.

Alberta — July 1, 1969.

Ontario — October 1, 1969.

Expenses paid by provincial medical plans after those dates do not qualify as expenses paid by, or on behalf of the taxpayer, and must not be used in the calculation to arrive at the deductible portion of medical expenses.

Then we come to the general rules for calculating the allowable portion.

Firstly there is the optional standard deduction of $100 for all medical expenses and charitable donations combined. No receipts are required to claim this $100 but it is important to recognize that it is in lieu of both medical expenses and donations. A taxpayer cannot claim $100 standard for medical expenses and seperately claim donations supported by receipts nor vice versa.

The expenses must have been paid by the taxpayer himself, or on behalf of the taxpayer through a non-provincial medical plan, for himself or for a person whom he could claim as a dependant. Medical expenses paid for a dependant such as a wife or a child who is not actually shown as a dependant because their income is too high may still be claimed. If a child has been claimed in fact as a dependent on say the husband's tax return the medical expenses for that child may be claimed on the husband's return but not on the wife's return.

The period for which medical expenses may be claimed is any twelve month span of time which ends in the taxation year. For example medical expenses paid or incurred between say, July 15, 1968 and July 15, 1969 fall into a 12 month period which ends in the 1969 taxation year.

TYPES SPELLED OUT

Then comes the reduction of the allowable expenses by 3 per cent of the net income of the taxpayer and it is the excess over that 3 per cent which is the portion allowable as a deduction.

The tax guide spells out the types of expenses which may be claimed.

It is not enough to show that a medical bill has been incurred. The tax assessor must see proof of payment such as a receipt, or a bill and cancelled cheque together. Most medical people and drugstores are prepared to issue duplicate receipts. But they would understandably, be a little short tempered if they are asked for duplicates late in April when they are struggling to make out their own tax returns.

Do it now even it if does seem confusing. Working out deductions with actual figures is really much easier than trying to understand the "wonderland" of rules.

FIRED FOR 'RANK INSUBORDINATION'

POILE IN COMMAND

Crozier Had a Job, But He Refused to Take It

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joe Crozier is a general manager without a hockey club today after being fired Wednesday by the National Hockey League-bound Canucks in favor of Bud Poile.

He left with a succinct but emphatic gesture of support from players of the Western Hockey League Canucks.

Canucks' president Thomas K. Scallen told a news conference that Crozier was fired for "rank insubordination" over earlier plans to enter the NHL with him next season as coach and general manager.

Scallen said an incident Tuesday night—when Crozier ignored a summons to a club directors' meeting — precipitated the sudden move.

Directors had planned to present Crozier with a letter informing him that Poile, formerly with Philadelphia Flyers, had been named special assistant to the president in charge of over-all supervision of hockey personnel and planning.

Crozier, apparently tipped off in advance, refused to appear at the meeting.

"In any sport the team has to come first," Scallen said. "At a directors' meeting Wednesday morning we reviewed a number of incidents and decided this rank insubordination would make it impossible for Joe to continue."

Crozier appeared only briefly at the news conference and left just prior to the arrival of Scallen, Poile and other team executives.

The Scallen plan was to place Poile, a 46-year-old native of Thunder Bay, Ont., in command of the team, with Crozier running the show on the ice.

Now, Poile takes over as general manager and vice-president. He is also technically coach until one is named, possibly within the next two weeks. Poile said he may revert to special assistant if or when a general manager and coach are named.

Scallen said team executives "were not happy with Joe Crozier's business practices—he's a good hockey man but not, in my judgment, a good businessman."

"I had several talks with Joe about the business end and I must say that the answers I got were less than satisfactory.

"We have a considerable investment in the club. We did not know where some of the money was going even when we asked."

A statement issued later by Canucks players said:

"It is agreed by all of us that he has an outstanding record for winning hockey games and championships—which is the successful conclusion to a hockey season.

"He has been a man of his word and we all respect him for it. He has brought winning hockey as well as first-class organization to Vancouver."

Scallen also said that Medicor, the club's Minneapolis-based parent company, has completed arrangements for financing a $1,750,000 down payment on purchase of Vancouver's $6,000,000 NHL franchise.

Medicor earlier bought the club for $2,800,000.

Before coming to Vancouver, Crozier coached and managed Rochester to three American Hockey League titles. In his first season with Canucks, the club finished second but coasted through the playoffs undefeated.

This season, the team has set several records for consecutive wins at home and away and remains well on top of the league over second place Portland.

Poile has led 16 teams to the playoffs in 18 years as a coach and general manager. His clubs have won six championships, including five in the WHL by Edmonton Flyers and San Francisco Seals when they were in the league.

"I think I know how Joe feels," Poile said, "having gone through something along the same lines myself."

Poile was fired as general manager by Philadelphia last December.

Bill WALKER

It has been almost a month since baseball named its own private investigator. Commissioner Bowie Kuhn must have known something. If he didn't, he does now. That's why he suspended pitcher Denny McLain of the Detroit Tigers.

McLain, it has been alleged, got his hands dirty dealing with bookies who never lost. They took other people's money under false pretenses. They collected only when they won, and refused to pay out when they lost. They left that job up to McLain. That's why he lost, in 1967, and is still the loser.

The agreement was unfair, and he finally got out. But the damage had been done. The imprint left its indelible mark. Now, he can only smudge it over. He can never rub it out.

He also has been accused of betting on games in sport, but not in baseball.

Which was the case in baseball's most famous scandal. The Black Sox of 1919 never did live down their indiscretions, and the suspected players never did get back into baseball either. Even though they were acquitted by a jury in 1921.

It was the 1919 World Series and the Chicago White Sox were considered to be one of baseball's strongest clubs. They were to play Cincinnati Reds in the series, and were prohibitive favorites to win it all. But the Reds won, five games to three. It was the following season that the whispers that were being heard the previous fall were now being shouted openly, and were loud enough to be recognized for what they were.

There had been some hanky-panky. The White Sox had been bribed. Some of the players had accepted money so that they would not win.

●

It turned out that there were eight players involved. They were pitcher Eddie Cicotte, left fielder Joe Jackson, third baseman Buck Weaver, shortstop Swede Riseberg, first baseman Chick Gandil, centre fielder Oscar "Happy" Flech, pitcher Lefty Williams and a untility infielder, Fred McMullin.

At the tial it was revealed that the original sell-out price was $100,000, but that only $47,000 ever changed hands.

Cicotte got $10,000. He was the Chicago ace. He had won 29 games while losing only seven during the year. Jackson got $5,000. He had asked for $20,000 but had settled for a lesser amount, even though he had a batting average that would rival Cobb's. Gandil, reputedly the payoff man, received $22,000. There were varying amounts to the others except Weaver.

Accused of holding out on his mates, Gandil swore that Abe Attell, former world featherweight champion, and his contact, hadn't paid off.

The other gramblers were reported to have been Arnold Rothstein, a notorious gangland figure, and Bill Burns, a former White Sox pitcher.

The money Cicotte received turned up under his pillow in a Cincinnati hotel room the night before the series. Cicotte said at his trial: "I'll remember the first night after I threw the first game if I lived to be 100 years old." He didn't live to be 100. He died last year at 84.

Jackson got his money in the same manner.

Cicotte admitted that he lobbed the ball up to the plate in the first game which the Reds won 9-1.

He also lost the fourth, 2-0, but in that one he allowed only five hits and no walks.

●

There were other moments of suspicion, and murmerings of internal strife, discontent and strange happenings were almost commonplace in the series.

Errors took place at crucial times, players held the ball slightly longer than necessary, and didn't move as quickly as they normally might.

And it was after the eighth game which Chicago lost, too easily, that owner Charles Comiskey began to conduct his own investigation. He felt his team was not that bad.

But the next season, all players, with the exception of Gandil, showed up for spring training. Gandil didn't bother to report. The others made the team.

And despite all the whisperings, and investigations, it wasn't until just before the World Series of 1920, that the full impact of the scandal burst upon the baseball scene.

The eight went on trial on charges involving bribery in the summer of 1921. They were acquitted on Aug. 2 of the same year. The following day they were read out of basefall for life by Judge Kennesaw Mountain Landis. He was baseball's new commissioner.

"Say it aint' so, Joe," a youngster was supposed to have said to Shoeless Joe Jackson, one of the folk heros of that era, as the court case was in progress, and as he tugged at his hero's sleeve.

Joe's answer is not recorded. But baseball's is.

Not for the players alone. But for what they were accused of doing.

It can never be rubbed out.

U.S. Team Surprises In World Puck Meet

BUCHAREST, Romania (AP) — The United States team had a day off today to think about its two overwhelming victories in Group B play of the world ice hockey championships.

"I was pleased with their performance," U.S. Coach Murray Williamson said Wednesday after the Americans trounced Bulgaria 19-1. The Americans had knocked off Japan 11-1 Tuesday, the opening day of the eight-nation tourney and play Yugoslavia Friday.

Williamson said he felt West Germany would be the strongest opponent. The West Germans also are 2-0 and play the Americans Saturday.

Wednesday the Americans got three-goal performances from Gary Gambucci, Hopkins, Minn.; Len Lilyholm, Minneapolis, and Craig Patrick, St. Louis, Mo.

Scoring twice were Jim McElmury, St. Paul Minn.; Peter Markle, Wayzata, Minn., and Bob Lindberg, Colorado Springs, Colo. Single tallies were registered by Don Ross, Bemidji, Minn.; Keith Christiansen, Duluth, Minn.; George Konik, Bloomington, Minn., and Larry Stordahl, Minneapolis.

JOHNNY BOWER . . . stepping into breach

AT SPORTS DINNER

Bower Takes King's Chair

As he has done so often in the past, Johnnie Bower is stepping into the breach for Toronto Maple Leafs.

Earlier, the Leafs had planned to send Frank "King" Clancy to represent the National Hockey League club at Victoria's third annual Sports Celebrity Dinner, at the Empress Hotel next Wednesday evening.

However, Clancy, who earned a place in the Hockey Hall-of-Fame through his feats as a Maple Leaf defenceman, and who since had added to his fame with his story-telling talents, was hospitalized with diabetes and is still unable to travel.

Stepping into Clancy's place at the head table for the Celebrity Dinner will be Bower, the amazing goaltender who has become almost a legend through his ability to defy age and remain in hockey's major league.

The Maple Leafs announced from Toronto today that Bower, listed in hockey records books as 45 and believed by some to be even older, will make the trip to Victoria between games in Oakland (Tuesday) and Los Angeles (Thursday), with the Toronto club taking care of his travel expenses.

SELECT GROUP

Bower's choice as a substitute for Clancy was welcomed by the dinner's co-sponsors — Kiwanis Club of Saanich and Greater Victoria Sports Council — because Johnny has become a familiar, and often heroic, figure to hockey fans across the nation during the past decade.

He will be in illustrious company at the affair since Joe Crozier, fired Wednesday as manager-coach of Vancouver Canucks; Jackie Parker, Father Athol Murray, Dave Mackenzie and Denny Veitch are already listed among the guest speakers and appearance of another outstanding sports personality was expected to be confirmed today.

Tickets for the dinner, which honors the city's top male and female athletes, the outstanding team and Victoria's "sportsman of the year," cost $10 each and are available from members of the sponsoring groups and from local arenas. Despite some rumors, it is not a stag affair and ladies are invited to attend.

Born in Prince Albert, Bower turned professional in 1945 with Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League after playing junior hockey with the Black Hawks in his home town.

His next 12 pro seasons were spent mainly with Cleveland, but also included on full campaign and two short stints with New York Rangers, two AHL years at Providence and a season (1954-55) at Vancouver, where he topped Western League goaltenders with seven shutouts and a 2.41 goals-against average.

Johnny finally got his big break when he moved up to Toronto for the 1958-59 campaign and he has been with the Leafs ever since.

The retirement rumors will start again near the end of this season, but the old warhorse of the hockey nets might fool them all again and be around for another campaign. He's that kind of guy.

Cats Bounce Back But Essos In Step

SPORTS

Editor: Doug Peden

Kamloops coach Joe Tennant failed to deliver his promise and Victoria now ogles Vancouver Centennials for the outside help the Cougars need if they hope to repeat as the pennant wavers in the British Columbia Junior Hockey League.

Cougars did their part Wednesday by lacing New Westminster Royals 10-2 but failed to get help from Kamloops, which dropped a 5-2 decision to Vernon.

The results left Victoria and Vernon deadlocked in first place. Cougars complete their schedule Saturday night in Memorial Arena by facing Vernon.

Essos, however, have two games in hand. They play in Vancouver on Friday and follow Saturday's visit to Victoria with a Sunday game in New Westminster.

MISSED MESSAGE

Tennant, whose team is destined to finish fourth, earlier expressed his preference to play Vernon in the semi-final round of the playoffs. His hopes would be realized if Vernon finishes second.

He promised to help Cougars' cause by defeating the Essos Wednesday. His Rockets, however, missed the message.

In Vancouver, defenceman Laurie Moore got the message and the Cougars rebounded in fine style from their 3-2 loss to Vancouver on Tuesday.

Moore wore the goat's horns after Tuesday's game, drawing 11 minutes in penalties during the third period. Seven of the 11 were wholly unnecessary and Moore's play virtually wiped out any hopes Cougars had of making a comeback.

DIFFERENT CAT

Wednesday, he was a different performer.

"To his credit," said coach Doug Anderson, "Laurie bounced back in great style. He took quite a verbal beating after Tuesday's game, yet he came up with a great effort against the Royals."

Moore's defence partner, Randy Bock, forgot his skates and was forced to use a borrowed pair. It obviously affected his skating, and Moore was forced to cover up several mistakes by Bock.

The Cougars opened quickly with a power-play goal by Bruce Cowick, his 25th, and never looked back. Cowick also picked up two assists to tie linemate Ted Plowe for club point-getting honors. Plowe also drew a pair of assists to raise his point count to 66.

Alex Shibicky also picked up three points, scoring twice and drawing one assist.

TWO FOR GREG

Rookie Greg Robinson and Pat Askew also scored two goals each while singles went to Gerry Bond and Rob Little.

John Dalzell and Mike Andruff scored for New Westminster.

At Kamloops, Vernon banged in three unanswered goals in the second period to break a 1-1 first-period tie and go on to down Kamloops.

Rockets opened the scoring at 9:32 of the first period when Dave Mitchell scored. Jack Marsh levelled matters for Vernon and then Don Manson, Bill Owens and John Price added second-period markers to give the visitors a 4-1 advantage going into the final stanza. Wayne Dye added the fifth goal for Vernon at 2:31 of the third period and Marv Ferg scored the other Kamloops marker before a crowd of 1,400.

Eagles Rally In Third

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Salt Lake City Golden Eagles, trailing 4-1 midway in the final period, rallied for three goals Wednesday night to tie the San Diego Gulls 4-4 in Western Hockey League play before a crowd of 5,689.

Jerry Mazer started the Salt Lake comeback, stealing the puck in front of the Gull net and scoring at 9:35.

Rollie Wilcox made it 4-3 less than four minutes later and Dan Schock knotted it with 3:47 to play.

Len Ronson and Alex Faulkner gave San Diego a 3-1 lead through the first two periods as Ronson extended his WHL goal-scoring lead with his 39th and 40th of the season.

The second goal came barely a minute after Ted Hodgson had scored the Eagles' first.

Stars, Kings Would Settle For Hab Woes

By Canadian Press

Coaches Charlie Burns and John Wilson would have been overjoyed with a National Hockey League win Wednesday night while Claude Ruel's anguish continued despite a victory by his Montreal Canadiens.

Burns and his Minnesota North Stars extended their current winless streak to 19 games when they settled for a 3-3 tie with Wilson's Los Angeles Kings who haven't won in their last 12 starts.

The Canadiens beat Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2 to move to within a point of the idle Boston Bruins who hold second spot in the East Division, but coach Ruel complained that it should have been an easier win.

In two other games, New York Rangers edged St. Louis Blues 2-1 to move four points in front of Boston, and last-place Toronto Maple Leafs took a 4-1 win over Oakland Seals who are fourth in the West Division.

"Always it's the same situation with us," said Ruel who last week talked of quitting his job behind the Montreal bench because of a minor slump by the Canadiens.

"We have a one-goal lead in the late stages and we have to just hope we can protect it. It used to be that the Canadiens killed other teams in the third period. But now if they have a slim lead like tonight, they just have to be cautious and try to keep it. We can't afford to take chances any more."

Ruel Scores Teams for Laxness

Ruel criticized his defence for allowing Pittsburgh to gain two first-period goals by Glen Sather.

"The defence was bad in that first period, but they didn't get any help from the forwards, either. I guess after a team has won so many league championships and Stanley Cups as Canadiens, they think things are going to come easy for them. But, nothing is easy."

Jacques Lemaire scored his 30th season goal in the first period and the Canadiens took the lead in the second session on goals by Mickey Redmond and Serge Savard.

The Canadiens had only 18 shots at Pittsburgh netminder Joe Daley while Rogatien Vachon had to make 29 saves to protect the narrow victory.

The crowd of 16,529 saw the first appearance in Canadiens uniform of centre Fran Huck, former star with the Canadian Nationals. Huck, on an eight-game tryout with the Montreal team, made only a brief appearance.

Defenceman Arnie Brown and left-winger Don Marshall scored for the Rangers before a home crowd of 17,250 and goalie Ed Giacomin made 36 saves to preserve the New York victory.

The Blues, whose only goal was scored by centre Red Berenson, disputed Marshall's goal, saying the puck had not gone in the net, but referee Art Skov allowed the score to stand.

Marshall wrenched his shoulder later in the game when he checked Gary Sabourin of the Blues. The 37-year-old winger was taken to hospital with a suspected shoulder separation.

Armstrong Provides Leaf Spark

In Toronto, veteran right-winger George Armstrong sparked the Leafs by setting up goals by Brit Selby and Mike Walton.

On both goals, Armstrong carried the puck in to the right of Oakland goalie Gary Smith and passed out in front for the scoring play.

Bob Pulford and Dave Keon got the other Toronto goals while Carol Vadnais ruined Marv Edwards' shutout bid with a goal in the second period.

Edwards, making only his second start in goal since recovering from a December knee injury, was called on to make only 24 saves while Smith stopped 39 shots.

The contest in Minneapolis, before a crowd of 12,421, ended in the fourth tie between the Kings and North Stars this season. Each team has one win over the other.

The North Stars, fifth in the West Division, got goals from Jean-Paul Parise, Bill Goldsworthy and Claude Larose.

Jim Peters scored twice for the last-place Kings and Dick Duff got the tying goal early in the third period.

Goalie Denis DeJordy made his second start since being traded last week from Chicago Black Hawks and kicked out 37 shots. Cesare Maniago made 30 saves for Minnesota.

Kay Tribe Wins

Kay Tribe captured "A" Division laurels during a "hidden-hole" competition for distaff golfers at Uplands Golf Club. Other winners were Win Winfield and Dorothy Austin.

OWENS ON STAFF

ROBINSON SIGNS

Running Is for the Birds . . .

By The Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles got a lecture on speed and a contract for power. Minnesota Twins, however, settled for the latter.

That's what happened in baseball Wednesday when Jesse Owens talked about running at the Orioles spring training camp, slugger Frank Robinson signed with Baltimore and slugger Harmon Killebrew signed with Minnesota.

Robinson, who batted .308 last season, drove in 100 runs and belted 32 homers, received an estimated $125,000 for his 15th major league year. Killebrew signed for a reported $90,000 after batting .276 with 140 RBI and 49 homers in 1969 when he was voted the American League's most valuable player.

Owens, a winner of four gold medals at the 1936 Olympic Games, now works for the American League. He lectured the Orioles on the art of running and conditioning.

"He can do nothing but help some of our players," said manager Earl Weaver, whose Orioles already are known as a team with better than average speed.

Owens is available to any AL team, and the Orioles were quick to accept his services.

Besides Killebrew, the Twins signed outfielder Bob Allison and rookie Herman Hills, leaving three players still unsigned—outfielder Cesar Tovar, first baseman Rich Reese and relief pitcher Ron Perranoski.

Baltimore also still has three unsigned players. They are pitcher Dave McNally, first baseman Boog Powell and second baseman Dave Johnson.

Other signings Wednesday included first baseman Lee May, by Cincinnati Reds, first baseman Don Mincher and pitcher Diego Segui, by Oakland Athletics.

MacRae Stays On Hill's Heels In Senior Race

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Jimmy Hill says when a curler reaches 50, he should be able to make shots like the one that put him in first place at the Canadian seniors' curling championship.

"After all, when you get this old, it's pretty well all you have left," he said after his perfect freeze in an extra end gave him a 7-6 victory Wednesday over previously unbeaten Slim Otterson of Calgary.

The likeable Delisle, Sask., farmer who throws with the precision of a finely-tuned machine is the only undefeated skip through six rounds of the 11-rink round-robin competition open to players 50 years and over. But he says:

"We're only halfway there and in curling anything can happen. Look at what happened when Alfie got off to a bad start."

He was talking about his Wednesday night game with defending champion Alf Phillips Sr. of Toronto, who had "what they call a bad night."

Hill ran the count right off the scoreboard as he humiliated the 61-year-old Ontario skip 16-3 to stay ahead of Otterson and Don MacRae's Nanaimo rink, who needed two hard-fought wins to stay alive.

MacRae, making his first appearance as a senior, played probably the finest two games of his curling career to get by Howard Wood, Jr., of Winnipeg 7-6 and Stan Brooker of Noranda, Ont., 9-7.

Otterson matched MacRae's 5-1 record with a 7-3 romp over winless Lawrence Carter of Amherst, N.S.

HAD CHEERING SECTION

MacRae gambled and won in the sixth end against Manitoba, intentionally blanking the end and passing up a chance to increase his 5-4 lead.

He had hoped to steal more than one with the hammer in the seventh and when Wood pulled even in the ninth, the Nanaimo newcomer needed a last rock draw to win it.

"We've got all of Nanaimo behind us which keeps the pressure on and makes you more determined," said MacRae.

"I felt confident about my shots for the first time this week."

Moyer Rules Middle Class

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Denny Moyer battered his way to a unanimous 12-round decision over Eddie Pace of Los Angeles Wednesday night to win the North American Boxing Federation middleweight championship.

Moyer, the World Boxing Association's contender for the middleweight crown, started slowly but counterpunched his way back into the fight in the middle rounds, then used a vicious left hook in the last four to win.

Four Jockeys Injured In Six-Horse Pileup

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — A six-horse spill that sent jockeys and thoroughbreds flying in Hialeah Park's final race Wednesday injured at least four of the riders.

Mike Hole and Fernando Torpo were the most seriously injured. Blood gushed from Hole's ear when his protective headgear was cracked in the mishap. He was admitted to a local hospital.

Toro suffered a broken hand in the spill before a stunned crowd of 19,2274. He was treated at the hospital and released.

The other jockeys involved—Charles Baltazar, Jorge Valasquez, Eddie Maple and Craig Perret—appeared to be not seriously hurt, doctors said.

The trouble developed when Mike V suddenly collapsed when heading into Hialeah's stretch turn on the infield turf course. With Toro riding, Mike V was running third and had nine horses at his heels.

Hole's mount, Mountain Pine, stumbled over Mike V and in rapid order, Sad Enough tumbled with Baltazar in the irons as did Maple and Big Cheese, Perret aboard Space Jog and Valasquez on Peters Gold. Mike V was the only horse that had to be destroyed.

Bantam Title For Saanich

Saanich clouted Victoria 12-2 Wednesday in Pearkes Arena to capture the city bantam hockey championship with an aggregate score of 20-4 in the two-game, total-goal playoff series.

Saanich also won the right to meet Comox this weekend in another two-game, total-goal series for the Vancouver Island crown.

Dennis McLean, Brent Patterson and Jim Storey led Saanich with two goals apiece while Rick Turcotte, Bob Cool, Lorne Halme, Tom Davies, Dave Peet and Barry McLachlan added one goal each.

Norm Allan and Tom Dohan replied for Victoria.

The Island series opens at 8 p.m. Saturday at Pearkes Arena and finishes with a game at Comox Sunday.

ANNUAL SCHOOL TOURNAMENT . . . . . . AT UVIC GYMNASIUM

Oak Bay Eyes Sixth Straight Crown

Oak Bay Bays will be gunning for an unprecedented sixth straight title when the 20th annual Vancouver Island high school boys' basketball championship tournament begins at 4:30 p.m. Friday at the University of Victoria gymnasium.

Bays repeated as league-champions this season after being edged 38-37 by Victoria Totems for the provincial title last year.

Totems finished in third place with Mount Douglas Rams second and Belmont Braves, fourth.

The tourney will be a single-loss elimination affair with the fourth-place finisher receiving the right to challenge the third-ranked team for its spot. The top three teams advance to the 25th annual B.C. final, March 11 through 14.

Upper-Island challengers to a lower-Island monopoly on the title since 1963 (when Alberni took all honors) are Cowichan, Courtenay Towhees, Campbell River and Port Alberni Chieftans.

Totems tackle Cowichan in the first game at 4:30 p.m.; Braves meet Towhees at 6; Rams take on Campbell River at 7:30 and Bays face Chieftans in the final Friday game at 9. Second-round action resumes at 9:30 a.m. Saturday with the final game set for 8:30 p.m.

Although the battles for team supremacy will command the most attention, additional interest in the tourney will be provided by speculation on which players will earn individual awards presented annually by the Daily Times.

Most coveted of the individual honors is the Times Trophy, which will go to the player voted most-valuable to his team in the scramble for the Island crown.

Other awards will be presented to members of the first all-star team and those selected for the second all-star squad.

Anne of Thousand Days Grates on London Critics

LONDON (CP) — Anne of the Thousand Days, the royal performance movie starring Genevieve Bujold of Montreal, has received rough treatment in a second wave of reviewws published here.

Earlier comments on the film were generally favorable, with special praise going to Miss Bujold for her portrayal of Anne Boleyn.

But today both The Evening News and The Evening Standard dub the film "Anne of the Thousand Hours" in describing how boring their critics found it. The New Statesman says "nothing could be staler."

Miss Bujold "is certainly pretty, pert and winning enough for any king to fall in love with," writes Felix Barker in The News. But the film forces her into the role of a kittenish, calculating coquette whose behavior would never have been tolerated at court for a moment.

Terming the picture "30 years out of date," Alexander Walker of The Standard writes that Miss Bujold does sifficiently well to "qualify as the junior miss size of French star Jeanne Moreau."

Anne of the Thousand Days, the story of King Henry VIII's ill-fated second wife, was given its London premiere Monday night in the presence of the Queen. Richard Burton portrays Henry.

Train Welcomed

PERTH (Reuters) — Australia's first direct transcontinental passenger express train arrived here today one minute ahead of schedule after a 2,461-mile trip to a welcome from a crowd of more than 6,000. The Indian express link between the Indian and Pacific oceans cost $227,000,000.

Lawmen Pack Them In

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — "We're the local fuzz," announced the three policemen to a noisy crowd as a spotlight cut through the darkness.

But these policemen weren't aiming the spotlight, they were in it. And the crowd in the Brown Palace Hotel was cheering.

These policemen were The Lawmen, a tuxedo-clad trio of sheriff's officers from neighboring Jefferson County, and they were off and singing with the soft sell on law enforcement that has become their trademark. Their repertoire ranges from impersonations of Tiny Tim and Johnny Cash to a rousing Daddy Sang Bass in their own style.

The trio — Noel Fryberger, Bo Cottrell and John Crout — started singing two years ago.

STARKER

Janos Starker, without doubt one of today's finest 'cellists, limits his public appearances to 60 per year. This year, he will use up three of those 60 appearances in sleepy(?), backward(?), unmusical (?), not-with-it (?) Victoria. This is both a tribute to the calibre of Symphony '70 and to the persuasive powers of Laszlo Gati, who secured his services at the last minute to replace the ailing Rostropovich. Last time Mr. Gati's talents as an instant impresario were called for, Bela Siki and Esther Glazer responded with one of the season's finest concerts. You may confidently expect another musical masterpiece from Janos Starker and the Victoria Symphony Orchestra on Sunday and Monday, March 1st and 2nd, at the Royal Theatre. Mr. Starker will also appear in recital on TUESDAY, March 3rd, at the McPherson Playhouse. A few tickets are still available for the recital at the theatre, for the concert at Eaton's Box Office. Better reserve yours now!

Camouflaged 'Sun' Leaves Some Burning

By DON MacLACHLAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Life in a city without its daily newspapers is people leaping off the bus to pay 25 cents for what they think is The Sun and find is a camouflaged copy of Georgia Straight, a hippie weekly.

It's also trying to plan your night with last week's TV listings, seeing the man in front of you buy the drug store's last out-of-town paper and, above all, just missing seeing the news in writing.

Vancouver's daily papers—the evening Sun and morning Province—have not been published since Feb. 4 because of a dispute between five unions and Pacific Press Ltd., which prints the papers.

Because of the dispute, Pacific Press suspended operations, including printing of the papers, at which time the combined circulation of both exceeded 400,000 editions daily.

Some of the slack has been taken up by weeklies, flyers, radio, TV and out-of-town newspapers. The five unions at the weekend took up more of it by paper, The Express.

IS INTERIM MOVE

The unions planned to issue The Express only during the shutdown. It had no advertising in its first edition. It was billed in advance as a 15-cent, full-size paper, to come out three times a week.

Joe Yacowar has been peddling papers downtown for 12 years and says the shutdown is "just like with the sugar and butter" in the Second World War.

"They're coming in here crazy for newspapers. One guy grabs half a dozen; I'm too old to fight with him. Just like forbidden fruit; there aren't any papers so they want papers real bad."

The Toronto Globe and Mail, Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Victoria Colonist and Victoria Times are among dailies which have increased shipments here since last weekend; they all sell fast.

Several weeklies have increased press runs by 50 per cent or more, a TV station has added a 30-minute community information program, a current TV Guide is becoming worth its weight in gold.

MANY OTHER RESTRICTIONS

And things happen like this:

—A University of B.C. professor buys a New Westminster Columbian and puts it on the seat of a bus while he digs out his fare. When he looks up, the paper, and its new owner, have disappeared.

—An office boy picks up five copies of The Globe and Mail and returns to his building. The commissionaire at the door holds out a hand. "Sorry," says the boy, "these start with vice-presidents and move down."

—A cab driver at the airport growls at his passenger: "And you get on the plane and they give you a Calgary paper and you know we got none here and you leave the damn thing on the plane?"

—A man in a hotel lobby apologetically approaches another and asks if he might have his paper when he's through. "Well," comes the reply, "the chap in the sports coat there is next and the fellow sitting next to him is after that and . . ."

—A bearded youth outside a liquor store is selling papers. The page that shows is peach-colored, like the front of The Sun's final edition. The word Sun shows clearly but has two lines through the S, like a dollar sign. It costs 25 cents; The Sun regularly costs 10. Buyers don't quibble, until they find they've bought a Georgia Straight. Some laugh; some are hostile.

SOME NEWS GETS AROUND

The news still circulates but, as Joe Yacowar says, "It's not the same without you reading it." Some weeklies are carrying more news but most have merely expanded to fill the advertising demands.

The North Shore Citizen normally puts out about 24,000 copies each Wednesday. Last week it printed Wednesday and Friday. Some 37,000 copies were moved Friday, carrying extra news, sports coverage—and advertising.

This week, the Citizen plans a 16-page classified advertising special, with 150,000 copies to be distributed through Greater Vancouver "because of requests from advertisers."

The department stores have added pages to their regular flyers and shifted daily newspaper advertising to radio, TV and weeklies. "We haven't cut the dollar volume," said one advertising man.

No figures are available for circulation increases by the Toronto and Victoria papers. The Columbian increased its press run to 42,000 from 29,400 a week ago, all to meet demand in its own area. The Victoria papers and the Nanaimo Free Press have increased circulation on Vancouver Island.

The Post-Intelligencer usually distributes about 800 copies a day here; this rose this week to more than 4,000. The Seattle Times, New York Times and Montreal Gazette also sell with speed.

"They're buying papers they've never heard of before," said a girl working in a hotel news stand. "They pick up the P-I and complain about all the American news but they buy it and run."

Stockbrokers' telephones ring steadily; several radio and TV stations have added business news but none can give the time to reading full stock listings from four or five exchanges.

Unless you catch a community program, you won't know who died, who had a baby, who was married. You can always write a letter to the editor to complain about it, but he hasn't got a paper either.

'Hands Off Fraser' for Power: MLA

Construction of a dam on the Fraser River 60 miles above Lytton would provide 7.5 million kilowatts of "the cheapest power in Canada," a Social Credit backbencher said Wednesday.

Evan Wolfe, MLA for Vancouver Centre, said the building of a dam at Moran could be done at an expense of $1.2 billion or 1.6 mills. He pointed out that power from the Peace projects when they are capacity would cost five mills.

Speaking on the estimates for the premier's office during an unexpected night sitting, Wolfe said the Moran dam would be the key to development of the Fraser River basin. The dam would be one of the biggest power developments in the world.

Wolfe said that the salmon run in that area with an annual value of $5 million could be protected by the spending of funds on salmon hatcheries and spawning beds, and this might even contribute to an increase in production. He added that a series of fish ladders could be built at the dam.

If it could be established that the salmon run would not suffer, then the government can take a good look at the establishment of a dam at Moran.

Dr. Howard McDiarmid (SC—Alberni) gave the proposal support if the fish could be safeguarded, but another government backbencher rejected the idea.

"Hands off the Fraser," said George Mussallem (SC—Dewdney). "That dear, beautiful Thompson and Fraser River system must be left alone."

* * *

Discussion on the estimates was begun when Opposition leader Dave Barrett said that he had witnessed the decline of the Social Credit party as a strong political force. The party lacked depth and philosophy, he added.

There had been no leadership out of the morass of inflation, Barrett suggested. What would happen when the premier would have to hand over the mantle of leadership? he asked.

Both Barrett and former NDP leader Robert Strachan called for updating of the parliamentary system including splitting of the session into two parts, more facilities to help the MLAs at work, a committee on procedure, and a greater role for private members' bills.

Liberal leader Dr. Patrick McGeer and Strachan criticized the government for spending funds on "propaganda ads" in the newspapers.

McGeer quoted one advertisement for B.C. Hydro in Wednesday's papers as saying that Bank of Canada interest rates were 9.19 per cent.

He pointed out that interest rates for pension funds of B.C. Hydro employees, civil servants and teachers were all about 8 per cent. He asked if these funds were not entitled to open market interest rates.

* * *

"Someone's being diddled, either the customers of B.C., or all the people whose funds are being held in trust by the minister of finance," McGeer said. He thought the people whose savings were used should have some say.

The Commonwealth Trust collapse was raised again in detail by Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Howe Sound) who read letters from several persons who invested in the Commonwealth Investors months after the government Syndicate in 1968 several had known the company was in trouble.

The efforts of people who lost their savings in the collapse to get redress from the government, Gardom said, appeared to be akin to the efforts of a mosquito to attract an elephant's attention.

One letter said the government should be charged with "criminal neglect" for allowing people to invest in a company it knew was on the rocks.

House Pays Respect To Long-Time Senator

The legislature observed a minute of silence Wednesday afternoon for the late B.C. Senator J. Wallace de Beque Farris.

Premier Bennett described the late senator, who died Wednesday at 91, as a "very distinguished" MLA, attorney-general and minister of labor.

Senator Farris was elected as an MLA for the Liberal party in 1916 and was appointed to the Senate in 1937.

Dentures Over 2 Years Old?

Dentures—especially older dentures—are harder to keep clean than natural teeth. And hard brushing with abrasive pastes or powders may damage or scratch.

That's why so many dentists now recommend soaking your dentures clean in easy-to-use KLEENITE.

KLEENITE has a 3-way formula—(1) detergent; (2) activated oxygen; (3) solvent—that surges to tiny crevices; penetrates where no brush can reach; helps soak away film and stain. The dingier the dentures, the more spectacular the results . . . with KLEENITE Denture Cleanser!

Court Upholds Lawyer's Appeal

Victoria lawyer Robert A. Price won an appeal in county court Friday against two convictions by Judge J. A. Byers in provincial court last Sept. 9.

Price was fined $400 on that occasion.

The two charges stated that Price:

1. Permitted a refusal to furnish a member of Belvedere Estates Ltd. with a copy of the financial statement and a copy of the auditor's report.

2. Permitted a refusal to furnish a copy of the minutes of a general meeting of the company.

Price, his brother Byron and the complainant, Aldo Vickery, were directors of the company.

UPHOLDS OBJECTION

In county court, Judge Montague Drake dismissed the conviction by upholding an objection raised by Price's defence counsel, Louis Lindholm.

Lindholm held that a company director could not be prosecuted under the counts for which Price had been found guilty unless the company had first been found guilty of the offence.

Judge Drake agreed. He said no act of law can declare guilt; it must be proven by facts and those facts must be presented in court.

Since no facts about a company offence had been presented in provincial court, the prosecution was "premature."

Price originally faced a three-count charge under the Companies Act. But Judge William Ostler quashed one count and transferred the others to Judge Byers.

'Despicable Behavior'

Edward Allen Poole, 22, no fixed address, was sentenced in provincial court Wednesday to 45 days in jail for theft under $50 and obtaining lodgings by fraud.

He was also placed on probation for a year.

He admitted stealing a Chargex card from Calvin Billinger, 901 Dunsmuir, where he was staying as a guest and using it to obtain money from the Toronto Dominion Bank and lodgings at the Scotsman's Motel and Cheltenham Motel on Gorge Road.

"It was despicable behavior to steal from a person while staying at his home as a guest," said Judge William Ostler.

* * *

Balfour J. Mackay, 36, Jordan River, was placed on probation for a year for assault, causing bodily harm, to Mrs. Mona Mackay, 713 Donovan Avenue. He pleaded guilty.

The assault followed an argument over their children.

"In such cases there usually is fault on both sides," said the judge. "But you are more at fault because of your drinking problem. This was a brutal assault."

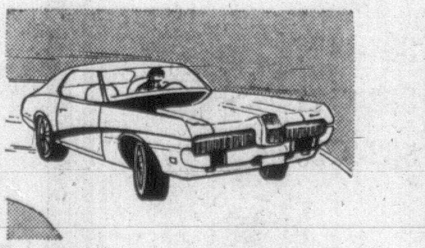
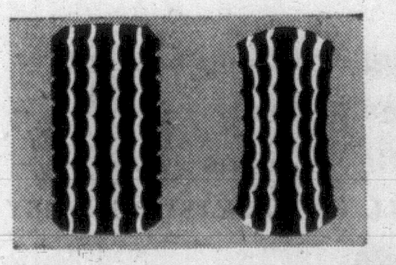
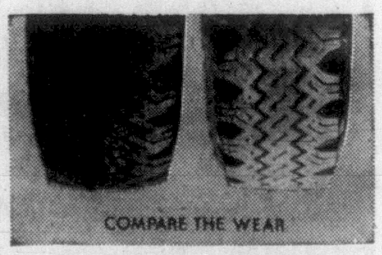
Two fiberglas belts under the tread give extra rigidity in the road contact area. The carcass under the belts is built with two plies of DuPont nylon cord . . . gives sidewalls flexibility.



The combination of flexible sidewalls and rigid tread, allows the tire to roll smoothly, but at the same time eliminates tread squirm.



Tread squirm is the greatest cause of tire wear in ordinary tires. The fiberglas belts in the Allstate Wideguard eliminate tread squirm and thus the tread lasts longer.



Tests prove it . . . Allstate Fiberglas belted tires give double the mileage of the same tire without belts. Since tread remains flat, you have more contact with the road . . . better traction for braking and control of your car.

Q. I changed jobs last year and received a lump sum payment from my previous employer's pension plan. I know this money can be taxed at a reduced rate but I do not know how to calculate this rate of tax. What should I do?

A. When filing your return you should proceed as follows:

Attach a note to your return requesting that the department apply the provisions of section 36 of the Income Tax Act to your lump sum payment. Also attach the T4A slip on which that payment is reported.

Complete your return as far as the "taxable income" figure but do not include the lump sum payment in your income.

Do not make any tax calculation, but enter on the line "total tax deducted per T4 and T4A slips," the total amount of your tax deductions including the amound deducted from the lump sum payment as shown on the T4A slip.

Q. Although I received the Old Age Security pension and the supplment, I am not yet 70 years of age so I cannot claim the age exemption. Do I have to file an income tax return because my income is over $950?

A The Old Age Security pension and supplment are part of your income for tax purposes, and if these plus any other income you may have exceeded $1,100, you should file an income tax return.

Q. My father died last year and I paid all the funeral expenses. Can I claim these on my income tax return ad deductions? I have always claimed my father as a dependant.

A. No. Funeral expenses are not an allowable deduction for income tax purposes.

Q. I paid $1,500 in alimony to my former wife last year. Can I claim all of this on my income tax return or just the married exemption of $1,000?

A. Provided it qualifies under the Income Tax Act, you may deduct the whole $1,500. There is no dollar limit on the amount of alimony that may qualify for deduction from income.

Q. I support my son who is at university. His income for the year—minus his tuition fees—comes to $980. I am told that when filing my tax return I can apply the Notch Provision. What does this mean?

A. This means that, in order to claim your son as a dependant, you must add the amount by which his income exceeds $950, in your case $30, to your tax. You will have to use the detailed tax calculation" method to determine your federal and provincial tax payable and show the $30 as a "tax adjustment" in the spaces provided.

Q. I purchased bonds in my son's name. For tax purposes is the interest on the bonds his income? Or is it my income and if so must I report it on my return?

A. Any interest income from the bonds should be reported as your income as long as your son is under 19 years of age.

Pick-Up Urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Medical Health officer Dr. G. H. Bonham has urged all city residents to use pick-up service at their local health unit office rather than dispose of pesticides by means of the sewer or by garbage pick-up. Meanwhile, The Society for Pollution and Environmental Control said a pesticides pickup will be organized Saturday throughout Greater Vancouver.

Maddox Calls Congressman Baboon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lester Maddox's attempt to hand out his famous axe handles in the U.S. Capitol restaurant ended in a shouting match Tuesday with a Negro Congressman whom the Georgia governor called a "baboon" and an "ass."

Representative Charles Diggs (Dem., Mich), said he told Maddox the axe handles were an "offensive racist symbol" and asked the governor to leave during the confrontation in the House of Representatives restaurant. Later he introduced a resolution withdrawing from Maddox the restaurant privileges extended to governors.

"I told him he was acting more like an ass than a man and later told him he was acting like a baboon rather than a congressman," Maddox told reporters.

As the operator of a racially segregated restaurant in Atlanta, Ga., Maddox closed down his business in 1964 rather than serve Negroes.

He got wide publicity when he passed out axe handles, which he dubbed "Pickrick drumsticks" after the brand name of his fried chicken, in front of the closed restaurant.

CLUBBED BY DWARF

ROME (CP) — Maria Marcon, 24, told police Tuesday she accepted a ride from a dark-haired stranger and was robbed by a three-foot dwarf who popped out of a cardboard box on the back seat.

Miss Marcon said she was clubbed on the head and when she recovered found herself lying on the street with $60 missing from her purse.

Canada Ignored In ABM Planning

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Wednesday that Canada was not consulted about plans to build additional anti-ballistic missile bases in the United States.

He said the enormous expenditure on armaments in the world is "very undesirable."

Sharp, facing a long series of Commons questions on the ABM bases and U.S. plans for another underground nuclear test explosion on Amchitka Island in the Aleutians, said the Americans have made the ABM decision on their own—"certainly there has been no consultation with Canada."

He added also that Russia did not consult Canada when it decided to build missile bases.

WILL EXPRESS VIEWS?

New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas unsuccessfully sought a special Commons debate on the U.S. ABM plans.

Harold Winch (NDP — Vancouver East) asked Sharp whether he would reconsider and express Canada's view on the planned expansion of the U.S. ABM system since the weapons are designed to shoot down enemy missiles over Canada.

The minister said he would rather they be shot down over Canada than be allowed to land on Canada.

"But they are headingf or the United States," shouted one MP.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield asked whether the government feels it was entitled to consultation because it is involved with the U.S. in continental defence.

Sharp said there is consultation in areas of mutual involvement, such as NATO and the North American Air Defence Command. He said the installation of the ABM system is "purely defensive and "they may help to defend us too."

The minister told Douglas that Canada has still not received data from the first nuclear test in the Aleutians last fall. A study of the test would be made before a decision is reached on any representations about the second test, which is "some years off."

Sharp told reporters outside the Commons that the ABM is a "system to discourage people from sending missiles."

If the missiles came, he did not think even the most complicated ABM setup would protect North America.

"Once the missiles start flying, it's the end of mankind."

He said Canada wants to work towards disarmament.

Referring to his statement in the [illegible] would rather the missiles be shot down over Canada than be allowed to land on Canada, he said:

"We'd really rather they didn't come at all."

'HERE COME THE SAILORS'

Internationally-known yachting lecturer-film maker John Biddle will present his latest film, "Here Come The Sailors," Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the McPherson Playhouse.

The 90-minute film will take its audience to sailing competitions in Colorado, Rhode Island and Lake Ontario and on a scenic crusie through Norway's southern waterways.

Convention Supports Shelf Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada has ratified a 12-year-old continental shelf convention deemed to support Canada's position in sovereignty disputes with the United States and France.

The areas in dispute are Georges Bank off the East Coast between Nova Scotia and Maine and portions of the shelf between Newfoundland and the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon.

The convention, ratified Feb. 6, will come into force for Canada March 8. It was worked out at a United Nations Law-of-the-sea conference in Geneva in 1958.

One of its clauses provides that where the same shelf is adjacent to two states whose coasts are opposite each other, its boundary will be determined by agreement between them.

"In the absence of agreement, and unless another boundary line is justified by special circumstances, the boundary is the median line, every point of which is equidistant from the nearest points of the baselines from which the breadth of the territorial sea of each state is measured."

Prime Minister Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday that in the case of Georges Bank, the U.S. argues that special circumstances within the meaning of the clause apply.

Talks on the question have been scheduled by Canada and the U.S.

Fish Resources 'Being Raped'

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's fish resources are being raped and pillaged by foreign fishing fleets while the federal government tackles the problem with all the energy of a jellyfish, the Commons was told Wednesday.

Lloyd R. Crouse (PC — South Shore), a fishing company executive from Lunenburg, N.S., called for an international conference of the major fishing countries to discuss the situation, which was causing "wholesale destruction" of such species as the Atlantic salmon.

He spoke during debate on a proposed government amendment to the Coastal Fisheries Protection Act. The amendment would give the government the authority to bar from Canadian ports service and supply vessels attached to foreign fishing fleets.

The bill was one of three dealing with fisheries which received third and final reading Wednesday and not go to the Senate.

The others were:

- A bill to establish a Crown corporation to market east coast saltfish.
- A bill eliminating a subsidy payment to East Coast fishermen.

Policemen Not Guilty Of Conspiracy

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — An all-white, U.S. District Court jury found three white policemen and a Negro private guard not guilty Wednesday of conspiracy in the Algiers Motel incident in which three black youths were killed during Detroit's 1967 riots.

They deliberated nearly nine hours.

Ronald August, 30, Robert Paille, 34, and David Senak, 25, said they would seek reinstatement with the Detroit police force. They indicated they might seek full back pay for their 2½ years off duty.

Melvin Dismukes, 26, the Negro guard, said he feared for his life.

"Every place I go, I go armed," Dismukes told reporters after the verdict.

They were accused of conspiring "to injure, oppress, threaten and intimidate" 10 occupants of the motel when they raided the building July 26, 1967, in a search for reported snipers.

Witnesses said two white girls and eight Negro youths were beaten with rifle butts or otherwise abused by police and National Guard troops.

The charges carried sentences of 10 years in prison and $10,000 in fines.

Norman Ruiter, jury foreman, said race was not a factor in the deliberations by the six women and six men who heard the case.

In an earlier trial, August was acquitted of first-degree murder in the death of one of the three youths slain at the motel—Aubrey Pollard, 19—and Dismukes was found not guilty of felonious assault in connection with one of the alleged beatings.

Two other criminal cases arising from the incident are pending in Michigan's appellate courts.

One is a conspiracy charge filed by the state, the other a first degree murder charge against Paille in the death of Fred Temple, 18. Both were dismissed by lower courts, but appealed by the state.

Lawyers Acquitted Of Fraud

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia court of appeal Wednesday acquitted two Vancouver lawyers sentenced to two-year jail terms on charges of defrauding a Vancouver mining company of $217,000.

Ted Duncan, a former professional football player with British Columbia Lions, and Frederick Foy had their convictions quashed by a two-to-one decision of the appeal court.

The two men had been charged in June, 1966, with defrauding Prosper Mining and Oils Ltd. of $217,000 used as security for a loan by Commonwealth Acceptance Corp. and the Royal Bank of Canada.

Both men were officials of the mining company at the time the charges were laid. They were convicted and sentenced February, 1969, in Vancouver county court.

They had been free on bail pending their appeal against the convictions.

DUNCAN EVENT

Mayor Hopes New Crossing To Aid Stores

DUNCAN — The city of Duncan got its long-awaited third crossing over the E & N tracks Wednesday with band music, speeches, ribbon-cutting and all the color of a country fair.

●

Mayor Jim Quaife cut a blue ribbon after thanking members of his council, past councils "—and particularly former alderman Hamish Mutter — and officials of the CPR and Marathon Realty for their contribution to the opening of the new crossing.

He said he hoped the new access that links Queen St. on the east side with Ingram on the west side would lead to establishment of new businesses along what will soon become a main downtown thoroughfare.

●

Duncan has two crossings already, also with flashing lights to warn of the three or four freights and one Dayliner that pass through daily. One is at James St. on the boundary with North Cowichan and the other at Government St.

The next problem to be solved is a new name for the street.

●

"It's a little ridiculous to have the street change name when you drive across the tracks," Ald. Jim Saunders said.

One meeting already has been held at which a name for the street was discussed and another to finally decide on it is to be scheduled.

Students Off As Teachers Meet Friday

DUNCAN — A convention of Cowichan teachers will be held Friday at Cowichan Senior Secondary School beginning with a panel discussion at 8:45 a.m.

All students will get the day off.

Bill Murray, public relations director for Cowichan District Teachers' Association, said today the theme of the convention is: Language of Communication and Communication of Language.

Four teachers will be on the panel: Mrs. Joan McKee, primary, Mrs. Irene Deschene, intermediate, Frank Mather, junior secondary and Jan Harris, senior secondary. Chairman of the convention and moderator will be John Cowans.

After the panel discussion the teachers will break into 10 groups of about 25 to discuss specific problems and after lunch spokesmen from each group will address the audience. A mass discussion will then conclude the conference.

SHOOTERS PLAN PRACTICE

DUNCAN — A practice shoot will be held March 1 at 1 p.m. by Cowichan Valley Gun Club, a spokesman for the club said today.

Situated on the Cowichan Lake Road, the club's new season got under way recently with shooters displaying mid-season form.

Cud Barris led the way by breaking 50 straight targets. He was followed by Jack Roach, Andy and John Bell of Lake Cowichan and Waverly Larson of Duncan who all turned in 25 straight hits.

Expert instruction will be available at the practice shoot for any new shooters who wish to attend, the spokesman said.

$25,000 Already Pledged In Girls' School Drive

DUNCAN — About $25,000 has been received in pledges so far in a recently-launched drive by Queen Margaret's School to raise $300,000 for a gymnasium, auditorium and dining hall.

Headmistress Miss Margaret Glide said an appeal has been made to former students, parents of present students and to friends of the school to donate to the fund.

The new facility will be named Founders' Hall in tribute to Miss Norah Denny and Miss Dorothy Geohegan, former head mistresses who opened the private girls' school in the spring of 1921.

The women are both freemen of the city of Duncan.

Miss Glide said she is confident the sum can be raised between now and next year.

Record Entries Assured For Cowichan Festival

DUNCAN — A bigger entry than last year has been assured for the 21st annual Cowichan Music Festival which runs from March 5 to 14, entry secretary Mrs. Preston Bruce said Wednesday.

There are 847 entries compared with 802 last year, making it the biggest competition held yet. Gains were made especially in vocal and dancing sections, she said.

Dancing and instrumental entries will be featured March 5, 6 and 7 with highlights in both sections on Saturday night, March 7.

The next week will be devoted to piano, speech arts and choral works with highlights in each being presented March 14.

The festival is sponsored by Cowichan Parent Teacher council and parent teacher associations of school districts 65, 66, and 67 and competitions are held in various schools in the Duncan-Cowichan area.

CeeVacs to Nanaimo For Track Clinic

DUNCAN — Members of CeeVacs — Cowichan Valley Athletic Club will go to Nanaimo this weekend for a British Columbia track and field clinic.

Attending will be Sharon Crabbe, Leigh Kinney, Sandra Major, Bob and Barbara Orech, Harold and Nancy Hamilton, Paul Washington, Craig Little, Dale Sharp, Rick Ratsinger, Doug Wilson, David Bremner and Gail Turney.

Miss Turney, one of the top sprinters in the club, placed second in the women's long jump in the Achilles International meet in Vancouver recently.

Miss Turney had a leap of 18 feet, five and three-quarter inches behind Chi Cheng of Formosa who had a jump of 20 feet, five inches.

The lanky 16-year-old also ran in the women's open 50-yard event and placed fifth with a time of 6.6. She has been training with CeeVacs for four years.

Stop American Speculators, Say Grits

The provincial government was challenged to stop American speculators from "manipulating the land market" in British Columbia in the legislature Wednesday.

Repeated efforts by Bob Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) and other MLAs failed to elicit a statement from Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford whose estimates were being debated at the time.

Shelford is the minister responsible for the Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act which involves land use planning.

Williams made several appeals for Canada Land Inventory studies on various regions of the province to be made public so that people in the regions could be involved in long-range decisions.

He suggested the studies, a joint federal-provincial effort, would show the error of the current land tenure system which allows foreign ownership of B.C. land "in perpetuity."

"Under your system you're letting wealthy Americans manipulate our market . . . European millionaires have bought the waterfront resource of the Gulf of Georgia.

LEASING SYSTEM

"There are 'no trespassing' signs almost everywhere you go because of land tenure system that is basically feudal in nature."

Williams urged Shelford to indicate that he has at least been considering the possiblity that a system of leasing land for agriculture and other uses is the answer to land use problems.

Shelford replied at one stage that the provincial cabinet set up a land use committee last year and that other interdepartmental committees are studying the land use question.

Pressed to get involved in the "philosophical" questions raised by Williams, Shelford was told by Premier Bennett in an undertone: "Don't answer."

'EVERYMAN ROLE'

Williams said the people of Mexico won't allow their land to be sold out to Americans and urged Shelford to play "an everyman role in opening up B.C. for the common man."

Williams said one example of land policy gone awry was the Gulf Islands which "we are in the process of wrecking."

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer asked Shelford if he would consider an ARDA study on the feasibility of turning the Gulf Islands into a park "both under water and over land" to save them from American speculators.

Williams said he wasn't proposing that Americans be kept out but "we shouldn't accept the idea of letting them have the land forever." A lease system of 20 or 25 years duration would provide the answer, he said.

"I'm pleading with the minister to indicated a kind of philosophy," he said.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) described government land use policy as "bumbling" and Opposition Leader Dave Barrett chimed in: "Don't know where they're going or where they've been."

MLAs Request Probe Into Horse Poisoning

MLAs asked Wednesday for an investigation into suggestions that young horses that died in the Trail area last year suffered from flourine poisoning instead of lead poisoning as indicated in a government report.

The suggestions were made by Dr. Frederick Exner, a Seattle radiologist and anti-flourine campaigner, on a television program Tuesday night.

Exner indicated that figures in a report of the Provincial Veterinary Laboratory in Abbotsford on the death of the foals giving lead content in the animals were not sufficient to poison the horses. Flourine figures were high enough to suggest the "possibility" that poisoning was due to that element, he added.

Allan Williams (Lib.—West Vancouver-Howe Sound) mentioned the conflict of opinions and asked for a full statement from Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford. The problem was too serious to be glossed over, he added.

The NDP MLA for Yale-Lillooet, William Hartley, asked why there was reference in the government report to flourine content in the urine and bone matter of the horses, but none in the blood.

Shelford said there appeared to be no question that the cause of death was lead poisoning.

Barrie Clark (Lib.—North Vancouver-Seymour) said that Exner was guilty of the "grossest misrepresentation of fact."

Williams said that Exner was not in Vancouver by accident . . . "It was very carefully arranged."

"Your department should move very quickly and meet with this man and whoever is sponsoring him and put a stop to it now," he added.

Singapore May Host C'wealth

LONDON (CP) — The next Commonwealth prime ministers' conference will be in Singapore in January, 1971, high-placed informants disclosed Wednesday.

The decision to hold the meeting, there followed a meeting today of Commonwealth high commissioners who have been consulting with their governments and with Secretary-General Arnold Smith on the question of the next conference.

Informants said that Ottawa, Trinidad and a number of other sites were considered. The Canadian government had indicated a willingness to be host at Ottawa, but not until the spring or summer of 1971. The British government favored an early meeting, possibly in July.

Top Price Paid

NEW YORK (Reuters) — The world auction record for a Van Gogh painting was broken Wednesday night when one of his most-famous works sold for $1,300,000—more than three times the former top price for any of his works. The painting was entitled Le Cupres et L'Arbre en Fleurs."

Saskatchewan Seeks Election Improvement

REGINA (CP) — Shorter election campaigns and a limit to campaign expenditures have been recommended by a committee of the Saskatchewan legislature, set up to find ways of improving elections.

The committee said that with modern communications and transportation, provincial election campaigns should be for 28 to 38 days, rather than the present limits of 32 to 38 days.

It proposed that individual candidates be restricted to spending 50 cents per elector in a provincial general election, and 75 cents per elector in a byelection. There are no limits now.

School Paper Folds

WINNIPEG (CP) — Youthbeat, a student newspaper with a twice-monthly circulation of 26,500, published its last issue today, after two years of operation.

Today's edition of the paper carried a banner headline announcing the decision to cease publication.

Youthbeat publisher Brian Gory, 26, is quoted in a front-page story as saying that a recent ban of Youthbeat in St. James-Assiniboia schools is the main factor behind the decision.

Plans Dropped

EDMONTON (CP) — Health Minister James Henderson says Alberta has dropped plans to introduce a legislative amendment which would give police unlimited search powers in cases involving hallucinogenic drugs. He said the so-called no-knock provision had been scrapped because there was "no known signs of public support" for it.

Professions Probed

EDMONTON (CP) — Legislation under which professions and occupations are regulated in Alberta is to come under close scrutiny by a standing committee of the legislature.

The legislature Wednesday approved health minister James Henderson's motion calling for the study.

The committee will be particularly interested in policies and principles contained in existing legislation as they relate to professions and occupations that have power of self-government as opposed to those regulated by a government operated licensing system.

Found Guilty

Winnipeg (CP) — Frank Puntigam, 53, a suburban St. James-Assiniboia bricklayer, was sentenced to life imprisonment Wednesday when he was convicted on a charge of non-capital murder.

A jury in Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench deliberated 90 minutes before reaching its verdict.

Puntigam was charged in the death of his wife Hildegard, who was last seen alive in mid-September, 1968.

Her body was uncovered by police from a rock garden in the backyard of Puntigam's home last Nov. 8.

Colder Air For Prairies

A band of cloud and some light snow will signal the arrival Friday morning of colder air which is expected to push southward into all regions of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Only patches of cloud were reported over the Edmonton region this morning and temperatures were in the twenties to low thirties.

In Winnipeg, skies were mostly cloudy today with periods of light snow. Clearing and a little colder is the forecast for Friday. Low last night in Brandon was zero.

Auto Plates to Reflect Light

REGINA (CP) — Reflector-type licence plates will be introduced in Saskatchewan for the licensing year starting May 1, provincial treasurer D. G. Steuart said Wednesday.

He told the legislature the new plates, designed for safer night driving, will cost more to produce and there will be a rise of one dollar per vehicle in licence fees.

★ ★ ★

The costs of the plates varies with the type of vehicle. The colors for 1970 will be white with green lettering — the reverse of the 1969 combination. The colors are those of the Saskatchewan Roughriders football club.

Another Liberal cabinet minister announced there will be no boost this year in private passenger and farm truck insurance rates.

Dave Boldt, minister in charge of Saskatchewan Government Insurance Office, a crown corporation, said the last such increase was in 1967.

There was a brief flurry when Boldt referred to a suggestion that an opposition member made Tuesday about imposing a one-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax, to help the car insurance fund.

Beware 'Fast-Buck' Invaders

By JIM HUME

Mayor Courtney Haddock urged Wednesday that Victoria real estate people make it tougher for "carpetbaggers and fast-buck artists" to locate in the city.

He made the appeal during a speech to the Victoria Real Estate Board at the Empress.

Haddock said he realized those present were salesmen.

"But I don't think you should go overboard when trying to get people to come here to live," he said. "What we want is selective selling, not mass selling.

"Don't make it too easy for the carpetbaggers and the fast-buck artists to come in here."

The mayor did not explain what he meant by "carpetbaggers and fast-buck artists."

While appealing for more careful appraisal of the people invited to come to Victoria to stay, Haddock said he felt the real estate business was missing a great opportunity to publicize the city.

Set Up Victoria Houses

"With your connections right across the country it shouldn't be too hard to set up what you might call a Victoria House in every major city," he said.

"It wouldn't cost you anything and it wouldn't cost the city anything. All you have to do is persuade one business in every city to put a Victoria display in its front window."

The mayor added that he thought such advertising would cut down on the annual expenses of the Victoria Publicity Bureau.

"About 20 years ago we had a couple of ferries bringing in a handful of cars. Now we have a ferry every hour bringing in 250 cars.

"We've reached our objective haven't we? What do we want, a boat every 15 minutes."

Haddock started to voice objections to the proposed multi-million, multi-storey high-rise tower to be built near the Bay.

"Can you imagine a 38-storey building towering over the Bay?" he asked. "How many of you think that's a good idea. Come on, let's have a show of hands."

Vote Favored Tower

The vote was about three to one in favor of the tower.

"Well," shrugged the mayor "I'll have to be guided by you people."

And he added ruefully: "When I was at Woodwards we used to make a decision and ask why the job wasn't done yesterday. It's different at city hall."

The mayor also appealed for support in his push for total amalgamation of the four core municipalities.

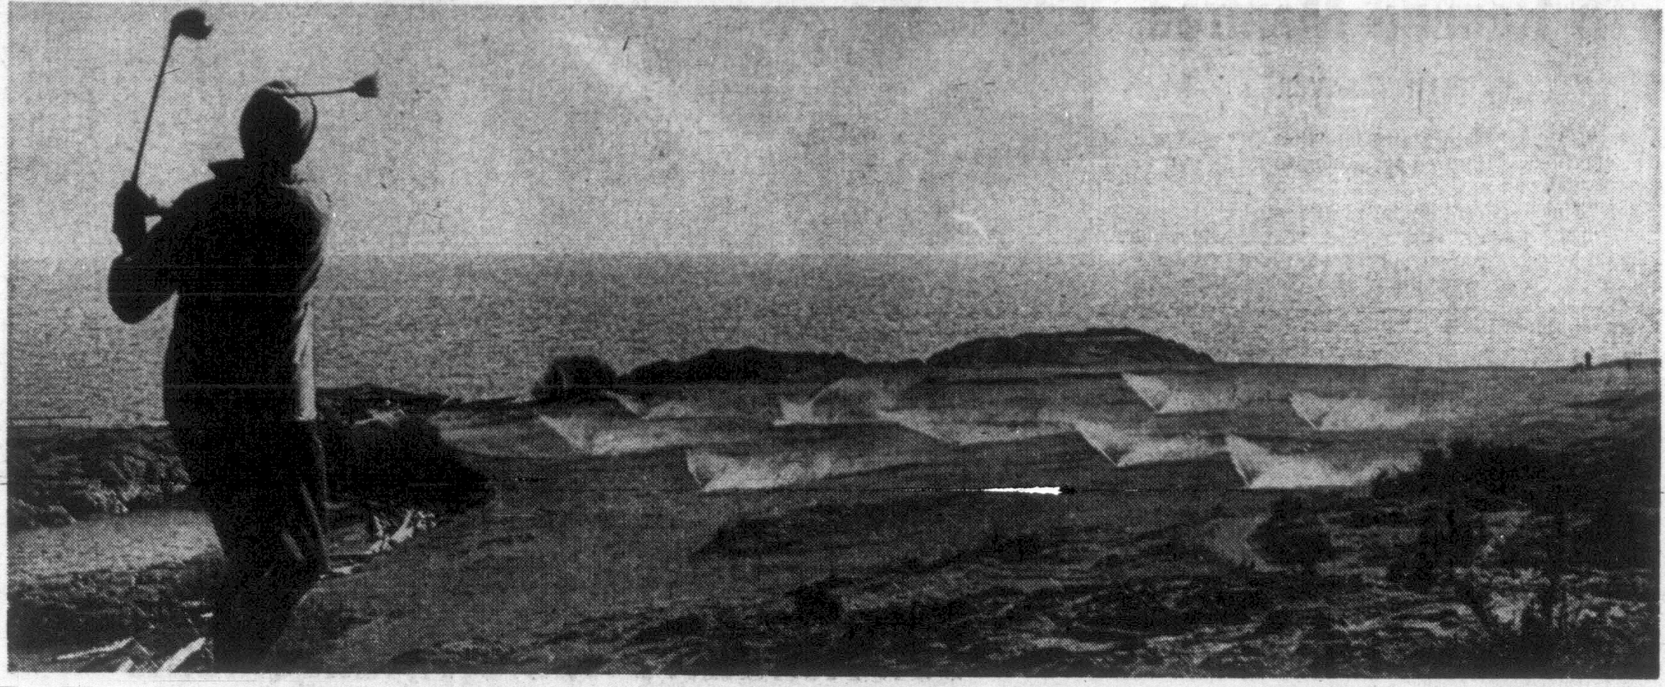
"Wherever you live, Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Saanich or Victoria you should be telling your elected representatives that you want amalgamation," he said.

"And if we can't get full amalgamation, let's at least amalgamate some of our essential services.

"I'm not going to mention any names, but we have three pretty unhappy police forces around here because of the actions of one municipality.

"Everybody agreed on a certain pay raise and then one municipality went and gave their policemen more than the others. The men on the other three police forces are pretty unhappy that they're not getting as much as the fourth."

Last year Saanich broke the formerly united negotiating ranks and agreed to a higher pay scale than Oak Bay, Victoria and Esquimalt.



The Water Hazards Pop Up Everywhere

View from the seventh has changed considerably at Royal Victoria Golf Club in Oak Bay. Irrigation operations that keep the turf springy have been revolutionized with the first fully automatic pop-up sprinkling system in Canada. Operated from a central console, sprinklers can be electronically scheduled to water fairways and recessed when not in use. Installation of the system, worth $115,000, began in September and was completed last week. (Photo by Bill Halkett.)

Uvic Barriers Stiffen Again

Restrictions on enrolment at the University of Victoria will apply to second-year students this fall as well as first-yeear students who were hit by the move last year.

Uvic's board of governors, in a statement Wednesday, blamed "unprecedented demands on its facilities" in the first and second years.

To cope with the anticipated demand, the board has authorized a priority system for admission and re-registration.

In the first year, highest priority will go to B.C. students who have graduated on the academic-technical program and who have obtained an average of at least C plus in all Grade 11 and 12 courses except physical education and guidance.

The university expects to be able to admit all students in this highest priority category," the governors said.

PROBABLES

In addition, it is "highly probable" that places can be found for those in the next priority category, B.C. students coming from Grade 12 who have attained at least an average of C as well as those in certain other first-year classifications.

These other classifications include students who in a previous session at Uvic obtained satisfactory standing in three of their five courses, students from Grade 13 (B.C.) and transfer students from district and regional colleges who have the same qualifications.

"In doubt is the possibility of finding the places for students in the remaining priority categories: Grade 12 students whose average is less than C; students who fail at Uvic in 1969-70; and students who are not permanent residents of B.C.," the governors said.

FIVE COURSES

In the second year, highest priority will be given to applications from students who have passed five full courses at the university or in Grade 13 (B.C.) or at district and regional colleges.

It is "highly probable" that students from these three streams with four courses successfully completed will be granted places.

"However, there is some doubt about finding places for students who will have unsatisfactory standing at the University of Victoria for the current session and for students from out of province," the governors said.

FULTON HERE ON MARCH 20 FOR SPEECH

E. Davie Fulton, chairman of the B.C. Law Reform Commission and former federal minister of justice, will address the annual meeting of the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island March 20 at 7 p.m. at the Red Lion Motor Inn.

Fulton, also a former leader of the B.C. Progressive Conservative Party, will speak on The Law and the Need for Reform.

GARTRELL

School Policy 'Short-Sighted'

A request from Education Minister Donald Brothers that the Greater Victoria School Board reassess its classroom needs brought a stinging rebuke from the board's chairman.

Dr. Carron Jameson said provincial short-sightedness results in "shoddy, temporary and inefficient buildings."

Brothers' letter to the board says enrolment projections on which the board has based capital spending requirements have not proved out. He says there now are more than 4,000 fewer students in Greater Victoria schools than the board expected.

* * *

Jameson, at noon, had not received the letter made public by Brothers on Wednesday. It was sent in reply to a board letter sent Sept. 20 in which the board asked the department to release money, approved in a 1967 referendum, which is needed to repair sanitary facilities at Monterey School in Oak Bay.

The essence of the problem is that while voters approve projects in a referendum, the province retains the right of later approval and decides whether the money is to be released.

In May, 1967, voters approved a $13 million referendum — Referendum 10 — for capital spending in the school district.

It was intended, on the basis of projected enrolment, to provide 264 more classrooms in the district.

The board projection was, by Oct. 31, 1969, for 23,805 elementary pupils and 12,328 secondary students for a total 36,133.

Brothers' letter says the actual figures are 19,519 elementary; 12,178 secondary for a 31,697 total which is 4,436 less than the projection.

Jameson said he is at a loss to explain the figure differences, adding that the sole determining factor in the board's recommendations is "education needs."

He disagreed with Brothers' statement that there are 16 excess classrooms in the district.

"The department may feel that any classroom that is not chock-a-block with 35 to 40 students each day is in excess.

* * *

"But it has been proven that splitting up of classes for fast and slow learners and children with special problems is an important factor."

Says Brothers: ". . . your review of the Monterey situation . . . brings to my attention the total problems relative to the district.

"In view of the Referendum 10 over-projection; in view of the excess classrooms in the elementary system; in view of the excess building in spite of decreasing enrolment at Willows (elementary in Oak Bay); I would recommend the board reassess its position completely in light of these facts."

Bishop Sees Leaders Among Dissenters

Some of our future leaders, says the new Anglican Bishop of Vancouver Island, "will come from those who are most dissatisfied with conditions today."

A dedicated optimist and believer in youth, Dean Frederick Gartrell of Ottawa says he has "every faith in the future."

The recently-elected bishop was making his first visit to the diocese since his election Feb. 6. In an interview, he said he sees a new form of religion among youth.

"I find them very religious, but not in a traditional way. They have a feeling for religion that is expressed in such things as CUSO, the Peace Corps, Marches for Millions and civil rights.

"These are practical expressions of a deep religious concern and their dissatisfaction with the established order of things is part of that concern."

A dapper, brown-eyed man with dark hair, a quick step and a lively voice, Gartrell looks much younger than his 55 years.

He flew out from Ottawa Wednesday to spend a few days with Dean Brian Whitlow of Christ Church Cathedral, who has been administrator of the diocese since the death of Bishop John Anderson in November.

"I have visited Victoria as a tourist," he said, "but it will take me some time to get acquainted with the Vancouver Island diocese."

It is expected Gartrell will be consecrated bishop in Christ Church Cathedral some time in April.

He has been dean of Christ Church Cathedral, Ottawa, since 1962 and his wife and four children are still living there.

'Social Woes Can Destroy Us'

Social Welfare Minister P. A. Gaglardi wants Victoria businessmen to call him at 382-6111, extension 3600.

"Tell us what you need in the way of hired help, and we'll try to assist you as fast as we can," the minister told a meeting of Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce in the McPherson Theatre Wednesday.

Gaglardi spoke of the new rehabilitation office he has set up in the Legislative Buildings and in eight other centres across the province. "We want you businessmen to help us out. Call us whenever you need any kind of help and we'll do all we can to help you. And, remember, it's our duty to help those who cannot help themselves."

Gaglardi said free enterprise is on trial today as never before, and its survival depends on helping the poor and the unemployed. "If we don't look after our social problems, they will destroy us as they have destroyed other free enterprise systems."

The minister said he had "lain awake at nights" worrying over persons who were unemployed or seemed "unemployable," and had decided his ministry should be concerned with "rehabilitation" rather than "welfare."

SABOTAGES PRIDE

"Welfare sabotages a man's pride. He may be glad to get the money the state hands out but, inside, he's unhappy because he doesn't feel part of a creative society."

Gaglardi said any unemployed person who visits his office in the Legislative Buildings will be handed a card to fill out, and "everything possible will be done to find out what he or she is best suited for."

"We will only give them a cheque if we can't find them a job," the minister said.

He added that giving welfare cheques to alcoholics is aiding and abetting a disease.

"They should be put in places where they can be helped, not subsidized in visiting the nearest liquor store or beer parlor. This is horrible."

Gaglardi spoke of the dangers of inflation and said the government is putting in legislation to curb credit buying to a reasonable degree.

Ask The Times

Q. Who was Werner Stephan and what did he do.—A.B.

A. Stephan, says the Guiness Book of Records, was a German bomb disposal expert who defused 8,000 unexploded devices in West Berlin between 1945 and 1957. He worked on everything from fragmentation bombs to huge blockbusters, but ironically he was killed by a small grenade on the Grunewald blasting site.

Arthur Mayse . . .

WE WERE FOLLOWING our dog down the beach trail this morning when I glimpsed a marvel of nature through spring's lacework of new green. It was a forked sapling, with trunk just thick enough to provide a comfortable grip, and arms branching upward in matched curves.

The sight set memory tapping. Good slingshot prongs don't grow in every thicket, and here was a near-perfect example.

For a moment I was tempted to secure that wild-cherry crotch for future use. But my jack-knife was up at the house, and anyway, I still bear painfully in mind what happened when I last fooled around with primitive artillery.

★

Still, back in a less complex and more innocent world, I was a fair-to-middling hand with a slingshot, and with practice might still manage to jump a can at 20 paces.

It would have to be a customized slingshot, of course—one made in spring when the sap is stirring, with a finicky concentration on proportion, heft and pull. It might also need a magic that no adult is equipped to supply.

First, after that prong was freed of its bark and trimmed to size, it would be necessary to improve on the natural curve of its arms.

★

A boy bent on achieving perfection would take a shaving here and another there from the inside of those curves. He wouldn't be satisfied until they bent evenly to form a 'U'.

He would then tie them in that position with a length of kitchen string, and ease the prong into the oven of his mother's wood-and-coal range.

In this operation, careful timing was important. Once I made the mistake a slipping a bent and trussed prong behind the weekend roast, where it stayed beyond rescue to be cooked to a fare-ye-well.

The carefully-scissored strips of black or red inner tube that powered our slingshots had to have the proper degree of elasticity, and the leather oval that pouched our ammunition could be neither too thin nor too thick.

When all was trimmed, steamed, fitted and lashed, one finishing step still remained. This was to wrap the handle with black friction tape so that it would not slip in one's grasp.

The result of all this fussy attention to detail was a shooting-piece that holstered nicely in the hip pocket of a pair of bib overalls, and in use became an extension of the owner's arm.

★

Good shots weren't hard to find, but as in any art, the authentic virtuoso was rare.

I knew one such. His pet prong was sheathed in drugstore adhesive tape. It boasted a pair of translucent, square-cut English rubbers, and with it he never missed.

We were popping clamshells on a beach one day when an adult stroller paused to watch. He was both portly and pompous, and it wasn't long before he horned in.

"Not bad," he conceeded, "but I'll bet you can't break 10 in a row."

★

The marksman gave him a cool glance, fitted a pebble, and exploded another clamshell.

"At that range," the intruder taunted, "how could you miss?" Then, boasting the while about how good a slingshooter he was when young, he propped 10 clamshells at extreme range, and produced a quarter.

We gathered a bunch of well matched pebbles. My companion drew to the angle of his jaw and clouted the extreme left shell. Methodically he reduced the row. Then he bade me toss an extra shell in air and took it stylishly on the wing.

The man gave him a disapproving scowl, dropped his quarter in the shingle—where we found it after long search—and strode off.

That was slingshooting, and once on another beach I told some boys of a later generation about it.

My audience listened politely. Then one of the boys produced a slingshot from his hip pocket and offered it for a tryout.

It was a factory-made product. The prong was too big and felt all wrong, and the rubbers had too much stretch.

One of the kids propped a clamshell. I fitted a pebble, tilted the arms a little sideways for better sighting, drew, aimed, and let fly.

★

The shell didn't break. Instead, I hit my own thumbnail, and acquired a black bruise to point any one of several morals.

It's not my intention to review them here, but in sum, they explain why that almost-perfect crotch will remain untampered-with among the springtime greenery.

Mathilda's Mug To Remind Manfred

By PENNY SAVER

"I think," said Mathilda, "that I'll send my brother-in-law Manfred something to invite him to come and visit me."

"A nice six-cent letter?" I suggested.

"He'd lose it," she replied. "Oh, I will send him a letter, of course, but if I want him to come, I have to send something else too. Something practical, that he'll use often that will definitely remind him of me."

"A nice tie," I suggested. "Or a shirt, perhaps. If he smokes, a new pipe . . ."

"No," she replied. "You obviously don't know Manfred. He'd forget who gave him any of those things. What I need is something with my name on it, or my picture, or both. Say . . . I know just the thing.

"Manfred sits down to a nice cold beer every evening without fail, and the other day I saw some really nice beer-sized mugs with Victoria written on the side. If that doesn't remind him, nothing will."

The mugs Mathilda had in mind have more than just Victoria on their sides.

Made of clear glass, they are covered with pictures in gilt trimmed with black. The tiny scenes show a diver battling an octopus, the legislative buildings, Butchart Gardens and many other places of interest.

These mugs, which hold about a pint and could be used for many beverages other than beer (though I wouldn't try the hot ones myself), are $1.95 each.

While Mathilda was buying a mug for Manfred, I poked around and found a tiny pitcher of brilliant robin's egg blue.

It was the color that drew my eye, but the shape held me and before I left the store I had traded $2.95 and the appropriate tax for one of these Canadian-made items.

I won't try to describe the shape, but the handle does unusual things, arching right over from the spout. The resulting form isn't the best for pouring, but it does make a lovely vase.

Mathilda also bought herself a paperweight cum ornament made of delicately shaded glass and shaped like a bird.

These glass birds come in six different colors and resemble a swan as much as any other real-life model. They are $6.50 each.

If you would like to know where to find these items, please call 385-3131 between 9 a.m. and 12 noon.

SEW SIMPLE

By EUNICE FARMER

Dear Eunice Farmer,

I've misplaced any instructions you may have given about sewing with satin fabric. Now I'm just about to begin a satin dress and I'm afraid to tackle it. Can you give us any little tips for a professional look?—Mrs. J. M.

Dear Mrs. J.M.:

Satin is once again a newcomer to the world of fashion, it goes along with the "wet look." There are some techniques that are important because this fabric must be treated with tender loving care.

It's best to cut each piece of your garment in the same direction (use cutting instructions for fabrics with nap). Actually, satin doesn't have a nap, but does have a sheen that is changeable.

Don't machine stitch or press any darts or seams unless you are certain the fitting will be perfect. You can't take these marks out once they have been put in.

Always use a new sewing machine needle to avoid a blunt point tearing the fine threads of the fabric. When pinning is necessary, use very fine needles instead—such as a size 10 or 11 to avoid pinholes. Never sew over pins.

When pressing, press very lightly on the wrong side, never on the right side of the fabric. Satin should have a soft, rolled, unpressed look. Many of the better dresses will have a separate piece of bias interfacing applied in the hem for a softer, rolled look.

Don't avoid sewing with satin, it's a wonderful looking fabric, but keep these instructions handy for quick reference. Satin is used today for daytime as well as night-time clothes, at-home clothes, blouses and whatever.

Pieces of driftwood, such as the creature above, a slab of rock, pebbles, moss and an assortment of natural objects can be used to make decorative arrangements such as those suggested by Mrs. Beastall in the article below.

Apartment Dwellers Don't Need Flowers For Attractive Table Arrangements

By HILDA BEASTALL

Apartment dwelling can be a happy experience for gardeners if they determine to adjust their talents to the new life.

When the time comes to make the change, the appreciation of color, texture and design, all important for satisfying gardening, are talents to be translated for use in the new environment.

While fresh garden material may no longer be available for creating conventional flower arrangements, other more permanent materials may be used.

Since the greatest need for apartment dwellers will be to have something of the outdoors as part of their indoor living, the first components will likely be pieces of rock, small stones or pebbles, and driftwood.

Here we have a nucleus for several arrangements. No longer tied to vases and bowls, a slab of rock, a flat piece of interesting wood can form the background or the foundation on which to assemble more than one outdoor creation to enjoy indoors.

In the same collecting spirit, two or three tiny glass phials each to hold one stem of foliage or one flower stem will be just what is needed occasionally to vitalize an arrangement of rocks.

A two-inch long phial with a quarter-inch diameter opening can be either taped into position against a rock, wedged into a crevice or taped to a piece of driftwood.

With a twig from a fir tree or an arbutus, an outdoor scene is realistically depicted.

Smaller stones or pebbles used with a mirror base to reflect a larger rock may trigger a whole set of unique apartment arrangements never before assembled.

You will be the creator of a first. Soon we may even be seeing special sections in local flower show decorative divisions for apartment dwellers. These should require only that the materials used shall be predominantly natural. That is, emphasis will not be on plant material, but on rock, driftwood, moss, with perhaps a touch of plant material as an accessory.

Live moss is another "collector's item" for the apartment dweller.

Even a handful, found perhaps in a friend's garden, or on a woodland walk, will give pleasure for months.

It can be used in many ways — as a partial cover at the base of a rock to indicate below surface moisture; draping the foot of a tree stump in a simulated rain forest; or over stream-side boulders to show winter high water marks.

Moss will retain its freshness indefinitely in a plastic bag or a covered plastic bowl or dish. A cool place for storing when not being used could be the refrigerator. An atomizer will keep the moss fresh while in an arrangement.

All these collected items are a lot more easily stored in apartment cupboards than soil mixtures, flower pots and fertilizers required for the growing of house plants.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Guy Dyed

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have never seen a problem like mine in your column, but I hope you won't take this as a joke because this is a very serious problem to me.

I am 19, and go steady with a girl who is studying to be a beautician. She told me that I would look a lot better with my hair dyed, and she offered to do it for me, so I said, "O.K. go ahead."

Well, she did, and I must admit that I look much better this way. Naturally, it was quite noticeable, so all my friends kidded me about it. My problem is that I would like to keep my hair this color, but I don't want to be kidded. Do you think it is so bad a for a guy to dye his hair if he really thinks it looks better that way?—Dyed Guy.

DEAR GUY: Fly under any color you wish, Buddy. Just be sure you keep the roots covered because if there's anything that looks worse than a gal who needs a dye job, it's a guy.

DEAR ABBY: My brother brought his family from California to Texas to see his wife's folks and some of his.

I usually make friends with children easily, In fact I have had strange children come right up to me and make friends with me.

Though I tried my best, I couldn't seem to make friends with my little 6-year-old niece. She wouldn't even let me touch her hand to say goodbye to her. She just frowned when I went near her. I once heard a preacher say that he could tell what a family thought of him by the way the children acted toward him. Would I go wrong to apply the preacher's rule to my brother's case?—Hurt.

DEAR HURT: Yes. Preachers can be wrong occasionally, too.

DEAR ABBY: What wise advice you gave Hungry for Love, that stupid 22-year-old whose young husband is withholding his favors until she loses 50 pounds! Her excuses and self-pity left me cold, since in two years she could have lost 150 pounds, let alone 50. All she needs is a doctor, a diet—and determination.

Although her obvious ignorance of proper diet hardly recommends her as a wife and mother, her letter reveals a much more shocking ignorance of the value of physical attractiveness to sex, and of sex to marriage. The mystery to me is why it took her so long to miss his attentions—and why her husband is coming home at all! The fact that he is, only proves that he loves her.

Before marriage, my husband said to me, "Stay in shape for me, baby." I took the hint, and at 48, with a little effort, I still weight 112. If hungry for love could only see how that small effort pays off in fun, health, and romance.—Still Slim in Sunnyvale.

DEAR SLIM: "A little effort," you so glibly say. Perhaps for you, you lucky lady. But for many of your sisters, the toughest of all battles is the battle of the bulge.

Even the Romans Were Appalled At Teen-Age Dress

NEW YORK (UPI) — Don't look down your well-powdered nose on the teen-agers' dress of today. There are many basic reasons for the long hair on both the girls and the boys, the beads, the fringes, the long scarves, the unkempt look, the other fads that mark adolescent dress.

It was ever thus about apparel. The Roman fathers as early as the fourth century A.D. were dismayed when young dandies began to wear barbarian "Bracco" (trousers) despite public censure and interdict.

Society really never has given up criticism of manner of dress, whether among teenagers or adults, for with predistable regularity we hear the gospel of what is wrong — and right — in dress and adornment.

Why have the teen-agers captured the spotlight currently?

ALL RELATIVE

It is not simply because their dress is "so different from that of 10 years ago — or 10 minutes ago," says Dr. Mary Ellen Roach, professor in the school of family resources and consumer sciences, the University of Wisconsin.

In a detailed study of "adolescent dress," Dr. Roach points out that clothing uses by all ages are related to two kinds of survival — "survival of the species and survival of the individual human being."

It is the latter — survival of the individual — that Dr. Roach explores in a paper in the Journal of Home Economics, official publication of the American Home Economics Association.

Clothing helps to establish identity, especially crucial for teen-agers, says Dr. Roach. "A mature, older person knows himself fairly well and has usually found a self-image compatible with roles to be fulfilled and with which he can be comfortable," she writes.

TRY NEW MODES

"But teen-agers in their 'search for self' are adventuring into and trying out new modes of behavior within a society which offers many alternatives. Not surprising, therefore, is their susceptibility to fads as they cast about among the alternatives . . . clothes, cosmetics and grooming aids allow each to experiment with the image he wishes to present."

Dressing as others in his set dress is part of this survival of the individual, says Dr. Roach. The teen-ager seeks approval of his peers.

Also influential are education and economic factors — teens are "excluded more and more from employment in jobs of responsibility . . . giving them uncommitted time which to some extent is taken up by lengthened periods of schooling."

They become segregated in a small subculture with a language and dress all their own, aware of their situation but also giving evidence of trying "to live up to their reputation for subcultural clannishness and instability."

Unique Camp 'Opens Whole New World'

BOZEMAN, Mont. (UPI) — A unique camp, combining scenic beauty and oral and written instruction for deaf children, will open for the second time this summer at Hyalite Canyon south of here.

Dr. Jack Olson of Montana State University's speech department, who operates the camp, said 40 youngsters from Montana and surrounding states will attend the four-week camp this summer.

Last year, Olson said, 22 youths with speech and hearing afflictions attended and were taken on trips to Yellowstone Park, historic Virginia City and Lewis and Clark Caverns. There is the grandeur of mountain scenery and traditional camping activities, he said.

"This kind of thing opens up a whole new world to many of these kids, and we use the experiences to stimulate the desire to communicate — to use the language."

The camp was widely praised for its approach to the problem.

This year, college students will get into the act.

Students may earn up to 14 hours of college credit by taking courses to be held prior to and during the camp.

"Quite a number of students have expressed an interest in learning to work with deaf youngsters," he said. "but we want to encourage students in other colleges to participate, too."

Courses in teaching the deaf spoken and written communication will be offered on the MSU campus from June 15 to July 15.

When the camp opens July 18, students enrolled in the courses may put their new knowledge to work in a practical course, Olson said.

Two Men Rejected By Liberation Group

BOSTON (UPI) — Two males tried to invade a strictly for females meeting at Emmanuel College. They didn't make it.

A lecture for women was being conducted here by the Female Liberation Group with headquarters in Somerville. About 50 women were in attendance at Marian Hall when an unidentified young man tried to enter.

A woman near the door confronted the unwanted male and pushed him outside. She was aided by a uniformed policeman, one of three on duty to prevent male intrusion.

A second young man, seeing the difficulty encountered by the first, left on his own accord while his two lady companions entered the hall.

Indira Gandhi: A Study of a Woman in Power

LONDON — For the past four years Mrs. Indira Gandhi has presided over the harassed lives of the Indian people as their Prime Minister. She is still, at 52, a handsome woman, retaining the traditional and exciting beauty of the Kashmiri people who were ancestors to her father, the great Nehru.

But, far more remarkably, she has not broken down under the enormous strain of her office. She rules 520 million people — the second most populous nation on earth, and also one of the poorest and most turbulent. In the last few months she has declared war on the mighty bosses of her own Congress Party — the sprawling giant which, as a national movement led by her father and the Mahatma Gandhi, won freedom from British rule. And although the party is shattered, Mrs. Gandhi stands for the moment on the winning side.

Four years ago it seemed obvious that the Congress barons had chosen her as Premier because they believed they could lead her by the nose. She was thought to be physically weak because of the ill-health she had inherited from a tubercular mother. But whatever signs of frailty she may have shown at the start have disappeared now. Mrs. Gandhi seems positively to have thrived on power and today evidently yearns to have more of it under her direct control.

Nobody who saw her back in 1966, when she first assumed authority, could fail to be impressed by the change in her. A product — in part — of one of England's most exclusive schools for upper-class girls, she behaved in those early days — in her gestures, tricks of speech and controlled eagerness — exactly as one might expect a well-bred young lady to behave. At her first press conference she enchanted all with her wit, her charm and the modest courage with which she promised to face her staggering obligations.

To most it must then have appeared that new and exciting times were about to overtake a land which hitherto had seemed to be drowining in pessimism and failure. But before very long, Indians themselves were beginning to question her strength and fitness.

In the panegyrics which had hailed her rise to power, much had been made of the unique political education she had received as her father's social hostess and constant companion. For in the loneliness which afflicted him after his wife's early death, Nehru had come to rely almost wholly upon Indira for aid and comfort.

Then what had been seen as a vast advantage came to be thought a source of weakness. Her critics began openly to wonder if, after all, political wisdom could be absorbed by mere contagion. They dwelt instead on the many and melancholy deprivations Indira had been obliged to endure, through all her young years, in what was essentially a tragic situation.

She had been born into a rich and aristocratic family, ill-trained in the endurance of hardship, most of whose members, including Indira, were subjected to repeated imprisonment and mutual isolation by the British.

The winning of India's freedom did not release Indira into a life of her own. She had married a Parsi — Feroze Gandhi, potentially the best parliamentarian India ever had. But the demands put upon the Prime Minister's daughter scarcely allowed the couple a recognizable married life. He died in 1961.

They had two sons from whom Indira can have drawn only limited satisfaction. She became increasingly aloof and solitary in a crowded life and began to show, when her face was in respose, the deep melancholy which was also an aspect of her father. And as her promising Premiership seemed to be fading into ineffective helplessness, she herself sank more often from the old pleasant vivacity into rather sour silences.

Mrs. Gandhi's Westernized upbringing — after Badminton School she went on to Oxford — can have given her little support in her new situation. For few Westernized Indians have any real conception of what Western culture is about and, skimming the surface, really gain nothing from it.

Nor was her aristocratic background likely to make her feel at ease in an essentially peasant society — or in the company of Congress bosses whose crudeness her own father had often despised.

But even those who knew all this were not really prepared to see Mrs. Gandhi strike so ruthlessly herself at those who helped to put her in power when they began to question her policies. She is, in other words, fighting the Congress barons with weapons not unlike their own and to this end is exploiting the native toughness and cunning which belong irremediably to all Indian women.

These attributes come from bygone generations of Indian women leading secluded lives in kitchens and backyards, from which vantage point they had to intrigue and "manage" people, and to keep all their wits about them, in order to get anywhere at all. Few of them were ever intellectual giants; many of them were actually illiterate.

But the fact is that inside even the most scented, bejewelled and silken of modern Indian women, engaging in sophisticated chatter at cosmopolitan parties in Delhi's embassy enclave, there still lives a shrewd, tough peasant.

If it is true that, under the compulsions of circumstance, Mrs. Gandhi has changed and now intends to confront her opponents on their own cultural ground, what this will mean for India cannot be foreseen.

As turbulence and uncertainty grow in the biggest land now ruled by a woman, the sad prospect is that the fragments of her shattered party may all be overwhelmed. There is one certainty: Indira Gandhi is determined to remain Prime Minister as long as she can.

Nixon Says Yes To Claude's Midi

WASHINGTON (CP) — A one-woman Paris fashion show by Claude Pompidou, wife of the French president, has put President Nixon on record in favor of longer hemlines.

After witnessing the tall, slender, blonde Mme. Pompidou in four changes of costume that ran the gamut of longuette, midi and maxi — or from just below the knee to just above the ankle — during her first day in Washington, the president observed:

"Yes, I like them."

Mrs. Nixon said at the state dinner honoring French President Georges Pompidou and his wife Tuesday night that the mid-calf hemlines of earlier years "have always been my favorites."

Mrs. Nixon, however, stuck to American clothing in contrast to her guest's Paris fashions. She wore a pale green chiffon evening gown, dotted with brilliants, by Harvey Berin, whose New York house designed her inaugural ball dress.

At welcoming ceremonies at the White House, Mme. Pompidou wore a long grey suede with grey mink collar and matching pink hat. Her evening gown was torquoise and coral silk organza in a zig-zag pattern glistening with silver sequins, a creation of Pierre Cardin.

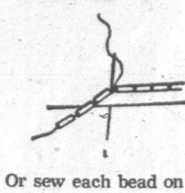
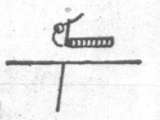
Beading Instructions

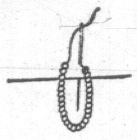
Tracery Beading: To outline a pattern or design. String beads on one thread. Place beads along outline and with second needle and thread tack down thread between each bead or between every third or fourth bead.



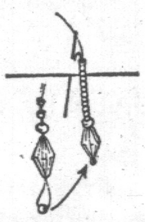
Or sew each bead on with a tiny back stitch.



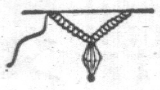
Single Loops: Bring thread up from underneath. String several beads on thread and bring needle to wrong side at entry point. Count beads for each loop for uniformity. Keep the loops relaxed rather than wiry.



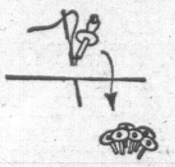
Single Fringe: Bring thread up from underneath. String several tiny beads on thread, then larger bead, then anchor bead. Bring thread back through all but anchor bead and into fabric at entry point.



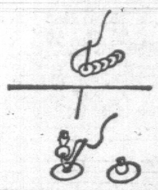
Edging Fringe: Usually done on finished edge. See illustration below:



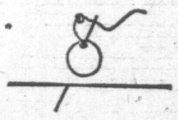
Raised Flower Design: Bring thread up from underneath. Slip one bugle bead on thread for stem, one sequin for head and anchor bead. Bring thread back through all but anchor bead at point of entry. Use in clusters to simulate flower head.



Sequins: Sew on with back stitch overlapping like fish scales, or individually with bead in centre. Use sequins lavishly rather than a spotty pattern.



Paillettes: Larger than sequins, sew on in similar manner.



Some "jewels" have holes drilled at the top. Simply sew on like buttons.

For leaves and scallops, use embroidery satin stitch slipping a few beads on thread for each stitch.

Combine silk or metallic embroidery with beading for a lavish effect.

When beading is completed, cut out section and assemble, using cording foot or zipper foot on machine.

Community Work Entices Church Groups

By JEAN SHARP

TORONTO (CP) — Within the United and Anglican churches, women's groups have begun a process of change that makes them administratively part of the total church. They are no longer what one spokesman describes as parallel but separate.

The process is gradual. In workaday terms it leaves room for local options. No one knows exactly what shape the changes will take in the long run.

The basic reasons for change, new outlooks on the part of society and the churches, have caused women in other churches to take a fresh look at their organizations as well. Approaches vary, but all the groups share a new interest in community and general church work. The day of the tightly knit organization concentrating solely on a special set of concerns seems to be over.

The Catholic Women's League has made some notable constitutional changes. Their national president, Mrs. Valentine Fabris of Winnipeg, says their main effect will be to put more responsibility at the grass roots, rather than at the top, in executive hands.

OUTLOOK BROADENS

"The church and the world are changing; and we found ourselves in the same structure we had been in for years."

The changes were studied for two years before they were initiated last year. They include a broadening of outlook to allow greater involvement in the community and provision for co-operation with other groups. They offer associate membership to non-Catholic women. They stress active involvement of members.

CWL directors, usually priests, now are advisers. They are no longer necessarily the people who make final decisions on league activities.

In St. Catharines, Ont., CWL members are working in the community in a number of ways. They are providing a meals-on-wheels service, giving financial help to a municipally built old age home and organizing an auxiliary for the hospital.

MAY CHANGE NAME

Finding "mission" in the home community as a new focus for activities is a possibility being considered by members of the Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society (Western division). Delegates voted at its last annual meeting to consider whether the name should be changed and to think about ways to extend its work into the community.

E. Luzetta McClelland of Toronto, WMS president, points out that nothing has as yet occurred. She says there may be less emphasis in the future on overseas missions and more on mission in members' own communities. She says a number of countries now are refusing missionary efforts by other countries.

There are signs of an interest in a new look in at least one Toronto Jewish group. Members of the Beth Tzedec Sisterhood were recently reported to have asked the right to vote and for representation on their congregation's board of governors.

Mrs. Murray Buchman, past president of the sisterhood, was quoted as saying she resents the fact there is only one vote to a family and it belongs only to the man of the family.

Hydro, PGE Bills Rushed, Charge MLAs

Opposition members in the legislature charged Wednesday that the government was trying to rush bills through the house without allowing proper scrutiny of the measures.

NDP and Liberal MLAs asked that bills permitting the government to purchase $35 million worth of capital stock of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, allowing extension of borrowing authority of the PGE from $190 to $240 million, and increasing the borrowing authority of B.C. Hydro by $250 million be submitted to the legislature Public Accounts Committee.

Opposition MLAs, in particular former NDP leader Robert Strachan, were ruled out of order repeatedly by chairman Herb Bruch.

THIRD READING

Despite NDP and Liberal objections the bills were given third reading. The legislature unanimously accepted the three bills in principle Tuesday.

NDP leader David Barrett said that the passage of the bills represented one of the few times that legislation had been given first and second reading in such a short time.

"Some wag said that it is something to do with the newspaper strike (currently under way in Vancouver) because the information would not be spread around to the public," he added.

ONE CLAUSE

Efforts of the opposition to have the bills discussed in the Public Accounts Committee were denied. Strachan, MLA for Cowichan-Malahat, asked as each bill was brought up that the matters be taken to committee, but he was ruled out of order by Bruch until the last bill — respecting the borrowing authority of B.C. Hydro — was discussed.

Strachan said he certainly must be permitted to speak on the question then because the bill only had one clause.

FASLE REPRESENTATION

Strachan was supported in his efforts by Liberal leader Dr. Patrick McGeer and Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds). Dowding charged that government was rushing the bills through and going to the people under "fasle representation."

Garde Gardom (Lib.—Vancouver-Point Grey) asked why public monies should not be under the public miscroscope, and why scrutiny is not permitted for the two Crown corporations that represent "the total debt of the province."

Both Liberal and NDP spokesmen charged that increases in hydro and bus fares were being paid for by "the little people of the province."

Despite repeated requests by Strachan to Premier Bennett asking whether the Public Accounts Committee would be allowed to examine the operations of the Crown corporations, the premier declined to answer.

COMPUTER SYSTEM IN CANADA URGED

Former NDP leader Robert Strachan Wednesday called for the establishment of a publicly-owned national computer system to help Canada maintain its sovereignty.

The MLA for Cowichan-Malahat made the suggestion in the legislature after quoting statements from Postmaster-General Eric Kierans in which the federal minister suggested Canada could lose control of how information was stored and controlled.

Kierans warned that computer systems located south of the border might threaten Canadian sovereignty.

★ ★ ★

Strachan said as a Canadian nationalist, he believes it is important that Canada should "have control over its own destiny." A computer system owned here would ensure that information would remain in the hands of Canadians, and permit the country to make its own decisions.

The MLA pointed out that the junta in Greece was aided in its takeover by NATO computers in that country. He asked that Premier Bennett discuss the establishment of a public computer system with Prime Minister Trueau.

U.S. Hikes Piano Tariffs

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Nixon Tuesday invoked for the first time the "escape clause" of the Trade Agreements Act of 1962 to provide assistance to an American industry claiming damage from import competition.

The president authorized adjustment assistance for firms and workers in the piano industry to help them adjust to foreign competition, mainly from Japan.

While the assistance is being put into effect, the president suspended temporarily the Kennedy Round Tariff Reductions, which on Jan. 1 dropped from 13.5 per cent to 11.5 per cent. He re-established the 13.5 per cent rate for three years.

The duty was scheduled to drop to 8.5 per cent on Jan. 1, 1972. The president's action postpones the reductions for three years, after which they again will be in order. The planned tariff reductions in grand pianos are not affected.

Experts on trade agreements said that the president's action did not represent a major shift in policy from his commitment to support freer trade.

Little Extra Work Required

By JACK BRASTALL

Shallow soils of the coastal region are not conducive to the production of long smooth parsnip roots, yet we see some beautiful 36-inch specimens in local fall shows. Such displays always raise the question of how the always raise the question of how the

Jack

The answer is easy, but the method involves a little extra work.

Instead of digging the soil deeply and trying to remove all lumps and small stones that cause roots to fork and branch, the seasoned exhibitor grows his parsnips in prepared holes.

These holes are punched some 36 to 40 inches deep with a crowbar. The bar is swung around in circles until the top of the hole is three to four inches across.

Next, the exhibitor goes to his compost heap and takes out some of the best soil from the bottom and centre of the heap.

This compost is worked through a screen with a one-half-inch mesh by rubbing it back and forth with a gloved hand.

All pieces rejected by the screen are thrown back on the heap.

The fine screened compost is then worked into the holes made with the crowbar.

To get it right down to the point of the hole, a piece of bamboo about four feet long is used.

This is first placed in the hole, then small amounts of screened compost are poured in and the bamboo agitated to work the compost down. Occasional tapping on top of the compost with the end of the bamboo will help eliminate air pockets.

The holes are slightly overfilled and left for a week so that the compost can settle.

Then two or three parsnip seeds are sown in a group near the centre of the hole. When these germinate the best seedling is slected for growing on, and the others removed and discarded.

This may seem a lot of work for a few parsnips, but one good root is more useful for cooking than six that are badly deformed. Therefore less roots need to be grown.

On the other hand, some seedsmen put out a stumpy parsnip which is somewhere around 12 inches in length. Maybe these would be the answer for the home gardener not interested in show specimens.

You can take your choice.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Commons Opening Was 'Puzzlement'

By BOB BOWMAN

Political observers must have been puzzled on February 26, 1920, when Parliament opened in Ottawa. Prime Minister Sir Robert Borden was on the Atlantic after having been away for weeks attending important postwar conferences in Europe. The Speech from the Throne, read by Governor-General the Duke of Devonshire, said practically nothing except to welcome members to the new building, finally completed after the original structure had been destroyed by fire on February 3, 1916. The members had spent the four years in the Ottawa Museum!

The prime minister was not only absent, but there was a good deal of doubt about the party affiliations of many members. The country had been ruled by a Coalition government since 1917, and now it was breaking up. Many of the Liberals who had supported Borden in the conscription crisis of 1917 wanted to get back to their own party. Others, led by T. A. Crerar, were talking about forming a Farmers' party. A United Farmers government had already been elected in Ontario and the movement was growing.

Until this time there had only been two political parties in federal politics, the Conservatives and Liberals. The House of Commons was designed to seat only two parties. It wasn't known how third or fourth parties could be accommodated. As it turned out, the Progressive party was formed and returned 64 members in the first postwar election the following year.

Although the session began in such a puzzling situation, there were a number of important developments including the creation of Canadian National Railways. Sir Robert Borden resigned as government leader, owing to illness, and was replaced by Arthur Meighen. There were also raises in pay for the members. The prime minister was given a boost to $15,000 while ordinary members received $4,000!

Other events on February 26:

1610 — Poutrincourt sailed from Dieppe for Port Royal.

1790 — Prime Minister Pitt of Britain demanded that Spain make restitution for seizing British ships at Nootka, Vancouver Island. This nearly caused war.

1798—David Thompson explored headwaters of Mississippi River en route to site of present-day Winnipeg.

1856 — John A. Macdonald and George Brown had bitter fight in Canadian Assembly.

1867 — British North America Act was passed by House of Lords.

1919 — Parliament opened session in which titles were abolished.

1960 — Anne Heggveit of Ottawa was first Canadian to win Olympic gold medal for skiing.

Third Strikeout

EDMONTON (CP) — Films by American pop artist Andy Warhol struck out here Tuesday for the third time.

The Alberta Film Censor Board banned a scheduled showing of "Bike Boy" to the Edmonton Film Society, a fate met by two previous Warhol films.

The society earlier this month had scheduled showings of the films "I A Man," and "Nude Restaurant."

FEEDING carrots to her pet elephant is Michelle Coppin, six, of Richmond Hill, Ont. Her parents bought the elephant last year after a local zoo had to close down. The big pet is housed in the family barn. (CP Wirephoto)

$10-a-Day Food Bill For Pet Elephant

RICHMOND HILL, Ont. (CP) — Michelle is six feet seven inches tall, weighs two tons and spends most of her time eating.

She consumes 150 pounds of hay a day, 30 gallons of water, eight bushels of carrots and a bushel of corn or oats.

Michelle is a six-year-old elephant — the pride and joy of Michelle Coppin who also is six.

David and Ruth Coppin, both 35, picked up the elephant when a zoo near this community on the northern outskirts of Toronto ran into a zoning problem and had to move last fall.

She is bedded with 37 riding horses, two Asian ponies and two ducks in a barn on the couple's farm.

Howeevr, r. Coppin is worried about Michelle's diet.

"I think she has psychological problems," he said. "For one thing, she's a compulsive eater."

Mr. Coppin says she runs up a $10 food bill each day.

The Coppins say they may have to sell Michelle because they are barely breaking even now on their sales of stock and produce plus the rent from 14 boarders on their farm.

SOLUTION FRIDAY

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

The deal diagrammed today is another in the series of bridge mysteries. You are informed that our South declarer made a "boo-boo" in the play, and thereby lost a game contract that should have been fulfilled. It is your job, as a bridge detective, to bring South's error to light.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

♣A Q J 10 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	1◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠

South's rebid of three notrump was an overbid, and North's response of one diamond on only five points wasn't exactly a gorgeous bid, but the fact remains that the final contract was a good one.

The five of spades was played from dummy on the opening lead, and East won the trick with his ace as South followed suit with the four. On East's spade return, South played the 10, West's king winning. A third spade lead was captured by South's queen.

The board was then entered via the heart ace, and a club finesse was taken, South finessing his queen successfully. Not being able to enter dummy again to repeat the finesse, South next laid down his ace of clubs. A third club lead was taken by East's king.

East now came back a heart, and West cashed two hearts and two spades, thus handing declarer a three-trick set. Where did declarer slip?

South's mistake came at trick one, when he played the four of spades on East's ace. South should have perceived that he needed two entries to dummy, to take two club finesses against East's hoped-for king. On East's ace of spades, South should have dropped the queen (at no cost, since dummy had the jack and South had the 10).

On East's spade return, South would play his four-spot. If West took his king (if he didn't, the board's nine would win the trick), dummy's jack would now provide declarer with a second entry to the board. Two successful club finesses could then be taken, enabling declarer to bring home five club tricks. Adding this to one spade, one heart, and two diamonds, declarer would now be home.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

MOVIE TO WATCH this evening is Invitation to a Gunfighter, at 7:30 on Channel 12. Yul Brynner, George Segal and Pat Hingle are featured in this 1964 western drama.

BILL COSBY. 8, Channels 2 and 6. The blind date routine is well worked in this episode. Coach Chet Kincaid is at first disturbed at having allowed himself to be trapped . . . but when he sees his date, Cicely Tyson, he changes his tune.

SPECIAL. 10, Channels 2 and 6. Canadian Crime Test is an audience participation show designed to show you how much you know—or don't know—about criminal law in Canada.

THE DON ADAMS SPECIAL. 8, Channel 7; 9:30, Channel 12. Hooray for Hollywood. Movie addict Don Adams, with pal Don Rickles and Edie Adams, has a ball recreating great screen moments and famous cliches from the Chaplin silents, all the way to Midnight Cowboy. At times, with ingenious makeup and wardrobe changes, the comics become look-alikes for the stars they're playing. Miss Adams is a grand Jeanette MacDonald to Rickles' Nelson Eddy, and Edie can go from Mae West, to Marilyn Monroe, to Ruby Keeler, to Ginger Rogers, and remain convincing. Don Adams clearly favors his Cagney, Ronald Colman, Bogie, and Victor McLaglen impersonations, while Rickles scores as Moses, a dancing Fred Astaire, and Dustin Hoffman. Original film clips precede many of the quick slapstick scenes and the pie-throwing never stops. Charlton Heston narrates.

THAT GIRL. 8, Channel 4. The Reunion. Funny outing that will ring true for anyone who ever attended a high school class reunion. Our scatter-brained actress-heroine is in charge of the preparations for the gala event, but she can't remember what she did with the money she collected five years ago. Good lines and the usual energetic playing by the regulars add up to fun.

THURSDAY NIGHT MOVIE. 9, Channel 7. Peyton Place (1957), Part I. Here's the original film adaptation of the Grace Metalious book which served as the basis for the popular TV soap opera, and it's actually much better than one might expect. Lana Turner and a fine supporting cast bring to life all the shady secrets of the New England town which made the novel a best seller. Granted, this is soap opera, but it's well played and the production is first-rate with excellent photography of a New England autumn adding greatly to the atmosphere. Diane Varsi as Allison and Hope Lange as Selena are the standouts among the young actors in the film. Part I tonight introduces all the characters and trots out the various scandals and problems.

DEAN MARTIN. 8:30, Channel 8; 10, Channel 5. Ann-Margret and Bob Newhart are Dean's only guests tonight. They play a married couple in a department store sketch in which Dino is the home furnishing clerk. Ann-Margret and Dean sing a duet; Newhart joins them for It's Better With a Union Man; Ann makes fun of arty dance numbers, swirling against wind-blown draperies; and Newhart comments on tense moments during an elevator "take-off."

PARIS 7000. 10, Channel 4. Ordeal. A welcome change finds George Hamilton in trouble himself rather than helping another person in a jam. Hamilton covers up for a drunken buddy and ends up being beaten, almost killed, and labeled a traitor to his country, until he can get to the bottom of some fancy double-dealing. Wilfrid Hyde-White plays another proper gentleman who turns out to be quite a sinister fellow.

MUSIC AND COMEDY mix well tonight on the Dean Martin Show with guest star Ann-Margret. It's at 8:30 on Channel 8, 10 on Channel 5.

THIS IS TOM JONES. 7:30, Channel 8; 9, Channel 4. Barbara McNair and Smokey Robinson and the Miracles add their distinctive style and mood to the hour, joining their host in song and taking numbers on their own. Barbara McNair's Get Out of Town and After St. Francis are highlights, and so is her duet with Tom to California Soul. Fool on the Hill and Tracks of My Tears give Smokey Robinson and The Miracles a chance to show their stuff, and comedian Dick Shawn comes on for a change-of-pace routine doing an impression of his host.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30: Channel 12: Air Cadet (1951 drama). Stephen McNally, Gail Russell.

7:30: Channel 12: Invitation to a Gunfighter (1964 western). Yul Brynner, George Segal, Pat Hingle.

9:00: Channel 7: Peyton Place (1957 drama). Lana Turner, Diane Varsi, Hope Lange (Part 1).

11:30: Channel 7: The Purple Mask (1955 adventure). Tony Curtis, Dan O'Herlihy, Colleen Miller.

70s AT '69 PRICES!

Here are a couple of GMC Handi-Vans that must go. Both are long wheelbase models, with heavy-duty axles, springs and brakes. One is a 250 six, the other a 307 eight. The six has windows all around, the eight has them in rear and side doors, and both have three-speed automatics and six-ply truck tires.

We are prepared to make an attractive deal on these; why not come in and talk about it?

THE EXTRAS
SPELL QUALITY
$49,400.
Excellent family home in choice high location near University, schools and stores, with views of Mount Tolmie and Mount Douglas. Built in 1968, this house has everything. A kitchen fully equipped with built-in range, stove, dishwasher, garburator, P.A. system to entrance and all rooms, and a spacious nook opening onto sundeck. There are three bathrooms (one five-piece) and a sauna room; a carefully engineered oil-burning hot water central heating system also supplies domestic instant hot water, which can be heated electrically when required.

The house is most attractively styled inside and out, blending its stone facing with the native rock and oak trees, yet providing space for paved patio, fountain, and a home garden—the whole area served by a concealed sprinkler system. The full high basement has a strikingly different family room with fireplace, opening if required into a matching bar; and it is roughed in and plumbed for expansion into a full residential suite.

Quality of materials and workmanship are apparent in all aspects of this excellent home, which is ideal for the active family, or for the busy couple who like to entertain. For an appointment to view please call.

Police Chases Opposed By New Group

NANAIMO — Legislation to prevent high-speed chases by police in apprehending criminals is advocated by a safety group here.

George Stevens, spokesman for the group, said they recently held an hour-long street poll to canvass public opinion.

Thirteen opposed high speed chases, four were in favor, two said it depended on circumstances.

Stevens said there had been several cases where speeders, being chased by police, had hit and killed or injured others.

He said members of his group are preparing the foundations of a British Columbia Highway Safety Corps. The inaugural meeting is scheduled for March 6.

Newsmen, Police Clash In Saigon

SAIGON (AP) — After a wild melee with foreign and Vietnamese news media representatives, national police tonight arrested a National Assembly member convicted of pro-Communist activity and sentenced to 20 years in prison.

The government in a surprise move agreed to a second trial for Assemblyman Tran Ngoc Chau, 46-year-old opponent of President Nguyen Van Thieu. Then several platoons of police surrounded the National Assembly building where Chau had been holed up for 80 hours while a military court tried and sentenced him in absentia.

About 50 members of the press and television were jammed into the second-floor office where Chau had camped out.

Several times police asked Chau and the reporters to leave but he refused, saying:

"Only the House speaker can order a congressman around."

Then the police went into action.

"They're clearing the room, one by one, I can't hang on much longer," Associated Press correspondent Peter Arnett reported by telephone, and then was cut off.

Police yanked the telephone Arnett was using from the wall, and plainclothesmen kicked and pushed television crew members and other reporters.

"The police were kicking and shouting; it was a really wild scene," Arnett reported.

One burly policeman waved a .38-calibre revolver at the reporters, he said.

Police dragged Chau from the building, threw him into a Jeep and drove off.

Belfast Bomb Injures Five

BELFAST (Reuters) — A time bomb exploded in a social club early today, injuring five persons and plunging this trouble-torn Northern Ireland capital to the brink of another sectarian riot.

Police and troops called in reinforcements to control angry Roman Catholics and Protestants incited by rumors.

It was the first time the Belfast bombings caused casualties. One victim was in hospital in serious condition.

Twenty persons were in the electrical workers social club in the centre of Belfast when the bomb went off seconds after midnight.

Police said they had no idea who was responsible.

Police and troops sealed off the area and erected barricades across the strett.

The explosion was the 11th in Belfast this year.

IT'S A DOG'S LIFE in the credit card business. And to testify this fact is Tareytown, a Dalmation. Tareytown's owner, Donald Boyd of Troy, Mich., received an application blank in the mail and bet his wife that the company "would give these cares to a dog." They did. It was returned with the name Tareytown Boyd, 2.7 years old and occupation as watchdog. The dog has now received letters from companies asking him to use his credit because he's a "preferred customer." (AP Wirephoto)

Extended Care Bed Plans Said Already Inadequate

A sample survey of private hospital patients in Greater Victoria shows there are enough who qualify for $1-a-day insurance care to more than half fill the 675 extended care beds planned for the hospital district.

Consultant Andrew Pitkethley told the region's hospital board meeting Wednesday there are probably another 60 or so patients in acute care beds qualified for extended care facilities.

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock added there are undoubtedly a number of people being cared for at home who would also be eligible.

DISCRIMINATION

"Right off the bat are extended care beds are gone before they are built."

The shortage of extended care beds means there is discrimination against many private hospital patients, said Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford.

"There are nearly 400 patients in private hospitals paying $300 to $500 month for care when they really qualify for $1-a-day care.

"We must move quickly on extended care hospitals."

The first 150 such beds, at Gorge Hospital, will likely be under construction this fall with facilities for another 75 to be started in the Saanich Peninsula early next year.

Board chairman, Mayor Jim Cumming of North Saanich, said the survey points out the need for extended care beds beyond what it now planned.

Pitkethley, said the needs had been calculated on the BCHIS basis of one for every 50 people over age 65 but the number of older people in the district is on the increase.

Art Gallery Gets Royal Handkerchief

The Queen has given the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria an embroidered handkerchief which was made for Queen Victoria for her diamond jubliee.

The gift is a gesture of appreciation for the exhibition Ladies and Gentlemen, the Queen Empress, organized by the gallery last May. The exhibition celebrated the 100th anniversary of the birth of Queen Victoria.

The handkerchief is described by Victoria and Albert Museum specialists in London as being a particularly fine example of English embroidery of the period.

A statement by the art gallery said it "fits admirably" into the collection of three centuries of English embroidery which an anonymous patron has been building up for the gallery.

Socred 'Sham' Charges Hartley

An NDP member of the special legislative committee on automobile insurance walked out of a meeting of the committee in disgust this morning.

William Hartley, MLA for Yale-Lillooet, charged that the meeting committee was being run as a "typical Social Credit sham."

Although Hartley left another NDP member of the committee present at the meeting, Alex Macdonald, MLA for Vancouver East stayed.

The furore arose when Gordon Root, public relations representative for the Victoria Insurance Agents Association presenting a brief to the committee, said savings on the Saskatchewan government-run auto insurance plan were not as great as Hartley suggested.

When Hartley asked Root to enlarge on his remark committee chairman Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) gave the floor to another member of the committee.

The NDP MLA became angered at the move by Capozzi and said if the committee was going to be run under Social Credit "dictatorship" he was leaving.

Capozzi replied, "well walk out."

Hartley stormed out of the room.

During the meeting Root said he was satisfied some aspects of the Saskatchewan system could be introduced within the framework of the insurance system in B.C.

Costs could be reduced if appraisal of damaged vehicles was done by one person, rather than several appraisers in different auto body shops doing estimates on jobs they did not get.

'NOT TOO DEEP'

Capozzi said after the meeting that the committee was endeavoring to not go too deeply into insurance rate structures at that point. He added that it appeared Hartley was looking for a dispute as the NDP member indicated that he was going to bring up the matter during discussion of the estimates of the premier's office this afternoon.

The chairman said he was "disturbed" by Hartley's action and that it was not the intent of the committee to be political. Capozzi said he was merely following the general order of speakers.

RACING DAYS AT END FOR MAJESTIC PRINCE

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — Majestic Prince, whose loss in the Belmont Stakes last June cost him racing's triple crown, will be sent to Lexington, Ky., for retirement to stud, says trainer Johnny Longden.

The Kentucky-bred, California-developed colt, owned by Canadian industrialist Frank McMahon, is suffering from a bone spur.

He will return to Leslie Combs' Spendthrift Farm, where he was born.

B.C. Tosses Scare At Saskatchewan

CALGARY (CP)—The opposition threw their best shots at Saskatchewan Wednesday in a futile bid to interrupt the young Saskatoon rink's march toward the Canadian women's curling championship.

Doreda Schoenhals' crew bent under the pressure, then snapped back with what seemed an endless stream of crisp clutch shots to emerge as the only undefeated team after seven rounds in the 10-rink, round-robin competition.

Mrs. Schoenhals, 22, and her bachelor-girl teammates, sister Cheryl Stirton, 20, at third, second Linda Burnham, 21, and lead Joan Andersen, 19, had just one more hurdle to clear for Saskatchewan's third championship — Manitoba in today's eighth round.

Glenda Buhr of Winnipeg, in second place with a 6-1 record, had to beat Saskatchewan to keep the outcome in doubt. No one else was within range.

Donna Clark of Burnaby, whose British Columbia rink left the Saskatoon squad trembling before bowing 9-8 in a tension-packed sixth-round clash, was in third place with five wins.

Saskatchewan coasted to its first four triumphs and Dorenda said: "Everybody was waiting to see what we could do when the going got tough."

Kay O'Neill of Kingston pushed Saskatchewan to its finest array of precise shooting and sweeping before her Ontario rink bowed 8-5 in the fifth round.

But it was B.C. that came closest to upsetting the Saskatoon girls, carving out a 6-2 lead after six ends.

"It looked bad, but we were not going to give up," Linda said. Saskatchewan dug into its reserve skills to bounce back into an 8-8 draw, but B.C. had last rock in the final end.

PROVED POINT

"Curling is a science," Dorenda said, and she proved her point with two technically perfect shots that left Miss Clark no choice but to attempt a draw to the four-point circle.

The pressure proved too much for the B.C. skip, as she mistakenly called for sweep action that carried her rock a foot too far into the back of the house.

Canadian Open Sans Sponsor

MONTREAL (CP) — The House of Seagram, sponsor of the annual Canadian open golf championship since 1936, will withdraw its support of the $125,000 tournament after 1972, Charles Bronfman, president of the distillery firm said Wednesday.

This year's Open is scheduled for the Hunt Club in London, Ont., July 2-5, Montreal's Richelieu Valley Golf Club in 1971 and at the nearby Hillsdale club at Ste. Therese, Que., in 1973. No site has been chosen for the 1972 championship.

"Our association with the Royal Canadian Golf Association will have gone through a 37-year period," Bronfman said. "During that time the RCGA and Seagrams have brought this annual Canadian golf classic to one of the ranking tournaments in the world."

He said government regulations prevent Seagrams from using the electronic media to advertise.

Bronfman said another company, without these restrictions, could easily take full advantage of the advertising opportunities the Open provides.

CALGARY (CP) — Shannon Clift of St. John's, Nfld., was named president of the Canadian Ladies Curling Association during its annual meeting Wednesday. She succeeds Jean Snowdon of Calgary.

The association announced that the 1971 Canadian women's championship will be held in St. John's with the 1972 round-robin tournament scheduled for Saskatoon.

In 1973, Prince Edward Island will play host to the championship and British Columbia in 1974.

HYDRO DAMS HAVE BECOME TOO EXPENSIVE

Costs Forcing N-Power Switch

By JOHN MIKA

British Columbia this week turned the corner to head into the atomic age.

Once across that threshhold it seems inprobable the province will turn back to damming major rivers for power development.

That appears to be the import of Premier Bennett's announcement that he has asked Ottawa to help build a nuclear power plant near Duncan.

●

It seems to be the death notice for the Liard River project favored by Resources Minister Ray Williston and a victory for B.C. Hydro Chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum and former co-chairman Dr. Hugh Keenleyside who argued for a switch to nuclear generating stations.

While the running argument of the past three years between Williston and the two power utility administrators was fought on technical grounds, Bennett likely made his decision on the basis of his specialty — money.

●

The tremendous increase in interest rates, which has played hob with costing projections for his pet "two-river power policy," seriously undermines the chief argument the premier has used in favoring hydro-electric generation — lower operating costs if dams are big enough to achieve economies of scale in capital costs.

There's not much point to achieving lower operating costs at the price of crippling capital costs which will take generations to pay off.

The "two river-policy" was started too late to escape the penalties of soaring interest rates which developed after the decision to go hydro rather than nuclear as other areas were starting to do.

Today most countries of the world have nuclear power plants in operation — from tropical India to the top of Greenland's ice cap. Ontario has had one in operation almost three years, is completing a larger one and building three more to produce one-third of its power needs before the end of the decade.

Almost 5.5 million kilowatts —close to double the Peace and Columbia projects — will be generated in Ontario nuclear power stations within a few years.

Quebec, like Ontario, also appears to be switching from hydro and has started toward its first nuclear power plant.

The argument over the balance of costs began in B.C. as long ago as late 1966 and by the following April broke into the open with a Times article, which pinpointed the proposed Duncan atomic station as the battleground.

●

At that time, Shrum and Kennleyside both were quoted as saying B.C. likely would not undertake any more major hydro-electric projects after the Peace and Columbia were completed and they urged construction of the first nuclear plant for southern Vancouver Island.

Keenleyside added that a firm decision between a new hydro giant and atomic power had to be made no later than 1972 and preferably earlier.

●

Williston disagreed, suggesting Vancouver Island's needs would be met by more submarine cables or expansion of the Jordan River plant and new hydro plants on northern Island rivers.

Bennett stayed out of the argument although privately he pointed out hydro power had an extra advantage because it could be interrupted during non-peak periods. But in the legislature he praised the Liard River proposal and authorized preliminary surveys to site a 2 million kilowatt project as the biggest single hydro installation of all.

. . . Turning Up Heat on Salmon

A switch by B.C. from hydro to nuclear energy does not eliminate a continuing problem for electrical generation in this province — preserving the salmon industry.

Damming rivers cut off spawning grounds — as well as flooding huge areas of land. The most logical hydro project in all B.C., the Fraser River, has consistently been forestalled because of the valuable fish runs.

Nuclear power plants eliminate that problem but pose another which, because of widespread concern over pollution problems, may prove even thornier to the government and B.C. Hydro's planners.

The immense heat developed by the atomic fuel is used to create steam to drive dynamos, but

BENSON VS. EXTREMISTS

Tax Reform 'Bomb' Needs Quick Defusing

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA—Finance Minister Benson is under powerful pressure this week to switch tactics on tax reform and to relax austerity for the real victims of inflation.

He is being urged by Liberal MPs and other advisers to move swiftly to defuse the tense political situation by revising immediately his white paper on tax reform to settle some of the controversial issues and by raising pensions for old people in need in his coming budget.

'Challenged' to Chose Sides

As he strives to carry through tax reform, Benson is being challenged to choose political sides between the low income groups who would profit from his proposals and the middle class who would suffer.

As he battles to keep the lid on government spending and on taxes to restrain inflation by balancing the budget, he has to face the fact that people on fixed incomes are carrying far more than a fair share of the burden of his policies.

Before he published his tax paper in November Benson received from aides a forecast of the public reaction. He was warned that after the initial honeymoon there would be severe criticism, and he said quite cheerfully that he expected to get hell from the business community.

Benson's strategy was to ride out the storm while the committees of Commons and Senate completed their enquiries into the tax plan, and then to come forward with compromise legislation.

Extremists Now Well Organized

No one foresaw, however, that the extremist opponents of the white paper would become so well organized and so successful, apparently, in touching a public nerve.

The drive to mobilize the middle class on the tax issue outside the main stream of party politics beginning to resemble the far-right movements in the United States.

The hate-rumors which plagued Trudeau during the 1968 election are coming back into circulation, discussion is escaping the bounds of reason and responsibility and the poison of extremism is seeping into the political mood.

Another new political factor in the situation is that Conservative leader Robert Stanfield had decided to jump ahead of the parliamentary enquiries, to make a major political issue of the tax paper.

Benson is now being advised that he cannot sit back and take this punishment, from the extremists and the Tories, for the next several months. He must fight back.

Retains Freedom to Amend Plans

His difficulty is to devise a way of defending his proposals without becoming committed to them. He must be able to answer the critics while retaining enough freedom to amend his plans in the light of debate.

Benson's solution may be to move swiftly to meet some of the technical criticism of his proposals so that the fight will focus on matters of broad importance and principle.

By dropping the plan to tax unrealized capital gains, lifting the tax limits well clear of private homes and property, offering reassurance to small businessmen who feel threatened by new taxes, and clearing up some other irritants, Benson could disarm much criticism.

He has already promised to furnish a supplementary white paper to the Commons committee, explaining the reasoning behind his original proposals and describing alternatives. Some of this material has already gone to the committee in confidence, and other papers are in draft in the finance department.

Benson could fairly easily convert this supplementary paper into a revision of the original document, rolling back some ideas.

This would help to bring the debate back from what are essentially technical questions to the central issue of shifting the tax burden from the lower income groups to the middle and upper income classes.

Tenants Gain Rights In New Legislation

By BRUCE YEMEN

"Radical changes" in the landlord - tenant relationship were introduced into the legislature Wednesday night by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

A 66-section bill, amending the Landlord and Tenant Act, puts agreements between tenants and landlords on the same basis as other contracts and appears to strengthen the position of tenants.

But Peterson said in an interview he doesn't expect the bill to satisfy completely either tenants or landlords.

Among the major provisions are:

- Unless a municipal bylaw states otherwise, security deposits are prohibited. These are usually required for possible damage or cleaning costs, but Peterson said there had been abuse of the system by too many landlords.
- A landlord can however, require a deposit to be applied to the last month's rent under a lease agreement, but must pay the tenant six per cent annual interest on the money.
- The right of the landlord to seize goods and furniture for non-payment of rent is abolished. Rental debts would have to be collected on the same basis as other debts.
- Landlords cannot enter premises of a tenant without written notice to the tenant at least 24 hours in advance of the time of entry, which must be between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. Exceptions to this rule are cases of emergency, of consent of tenant at time of entry, of landlord's right to show premises to prospective new tenants after notice to vacate has been given, and where the tenant has abandoned the premises.
- No lock may be altered on the premises by the landlord without the tenant's consent.

9.3 PER CENT INCREASE IN GNP

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada produced $78,099,000,000 in goods and services last year, a 9.3-per-cent increase in the gross national product despite a record loss of production because of labor disputes, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

The gross national product for 1968 was $71,454,000,000.

Hanoi Troops Continue Offensive Into Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos — Despite repeated bombing strikes by Laotian air force jets, North Vietnamese troops continued advancing today west of the Plain of Jars toward the highway linking this administrative capital with the royal capital of Luang Prabang.

Military sources, who reported the North Vietnamese advance, said Laotian ground forces had been withdrawn from the path of the Communist thrust. The resistance being offered to the advance, they said, was in the form of the bombing raids flown since Wednesday by T28 jets.

Meanwhile in Washington, with an angry attack against the American role in Laos, a group of senators has demanded the administration disclose how heavily the United States is involved in the Asian nation.

"The facts of our involvement have been concealed from the American people," Tennessee Democrat Albert Gore said during floor debate Wednesday, a charge supported by Senator Charles

Rioting Protesters Burn Bank

Times News Services

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Rampaging demonstrators protesting the "capitalist establishment" burned a Bank of America branch to a skeleton today while outnumbered police and firemen watched helplessly.

Police reinforcements were called in as about 800 protesters watched the flames burn out the inside of the one-storey, brick building.

One student said the branch of the biggest commercial bank in the United States was burned because "it holds the money for the war in Vietnam."

Then a solid phalanx of 240 helmeted officers swept through the campus community, Isla Vista, dispersing the crowd without a confrontation.

The retreating protesters pelted the oncoming officers with rocks and taunted them with shouts of "Piggy! Piggy! Piggy!" as they darted away.

The outbreak of fires and window smashing followed a campus speech Wednesday afternoon by Silliam Kunstler, a defence lawyer in the Chicago Seven riot trial.

★ ★ ★

Kunstler told some 5,000 persons "the real violence doesn't occur in Santa Barbara."

"The real violence occurs in the backrooms of police stations.

"I think the shadow of the Swastika is on every courthouse, on universities, on government buildings, maybe even on the apartment door next to you."

However, students denied the Kunstler speech was responsible for the violence, saying it stemmed from long-standing problems. All the windows of the same bank which was burned Wednesday had been broken out on Tuesday afternoon, when the trouble started.

Sheriff James Webster had described the situation as "completely out of hand" Wednesday night. He asked Gov. Ronald Reagan for National Guard troops, but guardsmen were not mobilized.

★ ★ ★

The bank fire was set by several protesters who rolled a gasoline-soaked trash bin in through a smashed windows, and set it ablaze against a wall, deputies said. Students from a nearby fraternity put out the blaze, but protesters fired it up again.

The one-square-mile Isla Vista community is populated mainly by apartment-dwelling students from the adjacent University of California campus six miles north of Santa Barbara.

The demonstrators explained they were protesting the war in Vietnam, the "capitalist establishment" that finances it and what a student called "increasing police repression aimed at stifling political dissent.

We kin start all over again with cabinet ministers, puttin' their names on nuclear plants 'stead o' dams an' artificial lakes.

MARKET SUMMARIES

N.Y. Rally Collapses

The stock market rally at New York collapsed today after a brief fling in late trading on Wednesday.

The quick turn-around today, Wall Street analysts said, was a result of fading hopes of investors that the move by the small Philadelphia bank in cutting its prime interest rate would be followed by the major banks.

Toronto was influenced by Wall Street and prices also suffered a decline. Trading results were delayed through a two-hour breakdown by the exchange's computer.

AT TORONTO, volume by 2 p.m. was 1,167,000 shares compared with 1,172,000 at the same time Wednesday.

Roman Corp. rose 2½ to 13½ and Denison 2½ to 42½, both after trading halts. Roman said it was negotiating sale of its 25-per-cent interest in Denison but no details were released.

AT NEW YORK, steels, motors, aircrafts, non-ferrous metals, chemicals, oils and drugs were mostly lower.

Losses among the savings and loans, which would stand to benefit from lower interest rates, included Imperial 1½ to 12½, Financial Federation 2⅛ to 20⅜, Far Western Financial 1⅜ to 16⅝, and Great Western Financial 1⅜ to 22⅝.

AT MONTREAL all sectors of the stock market declined in light trading today. Banks led losses.

The Royal Bank was off ⅞ to 22⅞ while the Toronto Dominion was unchanged at 22½.

Among industrials, Velcro Industries was down 1½ to 28, Labatt 1⅜ to 28½ and Simpsons-Sears ⅝ to 18⅜.

In senior mines and oils, Falconbridge gained 1½ to 178 and Inco ¼ to 47⅝. Imperial Oil slipped ¼ to 20½.

AT LONDON, prices declined slightly today in quiet trading on the stock exchange. The Wall Street upswing had no effect in London, as it was believed that the rally would not sustain itself.

Cunard was a gainer but the trend was downward, with falls in ICI, Beechams, Unilever and Rank.

Among Canadians, Consolidated Bathurst added 2 points while Pacific Pete, Inco, Power Corp., Alcan, Algoma and Central Del Rio were others to firm. Banks were quiet.

Amsai, up 5 points, led United States issues higher, with GM, Penn Central, Ford, Chrysler, Woolworth and United States Steel also firmer.

AT VANCOUVER, prices were generally down in light trading as the stock exchange reported a volume of 765,274 shares to 11 a.m.

In the industrials Gulf Oil of Canada traded 1,200 shares and was unchanged at $17.50. John Labatts preferred "A" traded 1,000 shares and was unchanged at $28.37. Northwest Life Financial was up .45 at $3.70 after a turnover of 3,200 shares.

In the oils United Bata Resources was down .15 at $3.00 after trading 4,400 shares. Plains Petroleums was down .01 at .39 on a turnover of 5,000 shares and Share Oil was down .01 at .23 on 4,600 shares.

In the mines Alice Lake traded 28,000 and was up .04 at .86. Coast Silver was unchanged at .90 after trading 25,000 shares. Kopan Development traded 27,500 shares and was down .03 at .23.

U.S. Stock Of Gold Increases

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. total gold stock increased by $23 million in Jnauary to a total of $11.88 billion, the treasury department has reported.

It was the sixth increase in the last seven months. It boosted the total stock to the highest point since February, 1968.

Total U.S. reserves assets, including gold, convertible foreign currencies, special drawing rights and the reserve position in the International Monetary Fund increased by $632 million in January to a total of $17.4 billion.

For the firt time, the treasury's report of reserve assets included $899 million in special drawing rights, the so-called "paper gold" put into effect by the major trading nations Jan. 1.

Oil Bonanza Report Said Irresponsible

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuters) — Reports that the Broken Hill Proprietary Co. Ltd. had struck an "oil bonanza" in its oil and natural gas field in Bass Strait off the Victorian coast were completely irresponsible, a spokesman for the company said today.

He said the reports had put a completely wrong emphasis on the company's interim report released Wednesday.

The spokesman said that in fact the company had announced no new field of commercial oil discovery.

He said there had not been a well drilled on the company's Snapper field in Bass Strait for six months or more.

"Talk of a new oil strike is completely irresponsible and completely without foundation," the spokesman said.

Merger Approved By British Gov't

LONDON CP) — The British government has given the go-ahead to a merger between the International Publshing Corp., the world's biggest publishing organization, and the Reed Group Ltd., which has extensive holdings in Canada.

The government announced it does not intend to refer paper-making Reed's proposed take-over of IPC to the monopolies commission, which could block the $1,000,000,000 deal.

Mineral Output Shows Decrease

TORONTO (CP) — Mineral output in Canada decreased last year for the first time in 10 years, John Kostiuk, president of the Mining Association of Canada, says.

He said the decrease was caused by strikes in the copper, nickel and iron ore industries.

He predicted 1970 would see a resumption of the previous trend toward increased output.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP) — Commission house liquidation pressure in the March rapeseed future continued at the close of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, causing declines of up to 14 cents.

Liquidation selling spilled over into the May future which also posted marginal losses, while deferred futures were steady near previous close levels.

Flax was steady in moderate trading. Offers from a U.S. house were taken by commission houses.

Oats and barley were steady near previous close levels in a moderate domestic shipper trade for eastern feeders.

Rye was steady in light trade that was most inter-month spreading.

Lakehead prices for Class Two and IGA wheat all were unchanged.

CHICAGO (AP) — All three commodities in the soybean complex came under profit-taking on the Board of Trade today.

Soybean meal declined more than $3 a ton, soybean oil eased more than 30 points and soybean futures came down around 1½ cents a bushel. Grain futures were generally weak.

Trade was mixed and public participation was noted on both sides.

Wheat futures showed some early strength but it dissipated as traders sold the nearby and bought new crop options.

Treasury Bill Market Closed To Small Savers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government has closed the lucrative treasury bill market to small investors.

The man with less than $10,000 to invest can no longer enter the market because it cost the government too much in paper work to process his investments.

The treasury department has raised the minimum denomination on bills — which have been paying about 7 per cent interest — from $1,000 to $10,000.

Paul A. Volcker, treasury undersecretary for monetary affairs, said one objective was to discourage individuals from buying bills with money withdrawn from savings and loan associations and other institutions that invest heavily in home loans.

Volcker said housing secretary George Romney supported the increase to take pressure off the mortgage market, but Virginia Knauer, President Nixon's consumer adviser, opposed the boost because she said it would deny high bill interest to small savers.

Treasury bills are short-term securities the government sells regularly to finance the national debt. At the present time, $3.1 billion worth of bills maturing in three or six months are sold weekly while $1.7 billion worth of bills maturing in nine months or one year are sold monthly.

Plans Dropped

EDMONTON (CP) — Health Minister James Henderson says Alberta has dropped plans to introduce a legislative amendment which would give police unlimited search powers in cases involving hallucinogenic drugs. He said the so-called no-knock provision had been scrapped because there was "no known signs of public support" for it.

Elections Studied

REGINA (CP) — Shorter election campaigns and a limit to campaign expenditures have been recommended by a committee of the Saskatchewan legislature, set up to find ways of improving elections.

The committee said that with modern communications and transportation, provincial election campaigns should be for 28 to 38 days, rather than the present limits of 32 to 38 days.

It proposed that individual candidates be restricted to spending 50 cents per elector in a provincial general election, and 75 cents per elector in a byelection. There are no limits now.

Professions Probed

EDMONTON (CP) — Legislation under which professions and occupations are regulated in Alberta is to come under close scrutiny by a standing committee of the legislature.

The legislature Wednesday approved health minister James Henderson's motion calling for the study.

The committee will be particularly interested in policies and principles contained in existing legislation as they relate to professions and occupations that have power of self-government as opposed to those regulated by a government operated licensing system.

School Paper Folds

WINNIPEG (CP) — Youthbeat, a student newspaper with a twice-monthly circulation of 26,500, published its last issue today, after two years of operation.

Today's edition of the paper carried a banner headline announcing the decision to cease publication.

Youthbeat publisher Brian Gory, 26, is quoted in a front-page story as saying that a recent ban of Youthbeat in St. James-Assiniboia schools is the main factor behind the decision.

Found Guilty

Winnipeg (CP) — Frank Puntigam, 53, a suburban St. James-Assiniboia bricklayer, was sentenced to life imprisonment Wednesday when he was convicted on a charge of non-capital murder.

A jury in Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench deliberated 90 minutes before reaching its verdict.

Puntigam was charged in the death of his wife Hildegard, who was last seen alive in mid-September, 1968.

Her body was uncovered by police from a rock garden in the backyard of Puntigam's home last Nov. 8.

Colder Air For Prairies

A band of cloud and some light snow will signal the arrival Friday morning of colder air which is expected to push southward into all regions of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Only patches of cloud were reported over the Edmonton region this morning and temperatures were in the twenties to low thirties.

In Winnipeg, skies were mostly cloudy today with periods of light snow. Clearing and a little colder is the forecast for Friday. Low last night in Brandon was zero.

Judgment Ignored

WINNIPEG (CP) — H. B. Sneath, chairman of Manitoba Pool Elevators, said Wednesday that his company will continue to observe Canadian wheat board regulations despite a court judgment which questioned the constitutionality of quota rules. He said it is "completely unacceptable that we should try to handle grain in Canada without a quota system."

Auto Plates to Reflect Light

REGINA (CP) — Reflector-type licence plates will be introduced in Saskatchewan for the licensing year starting May 1, provincial treasurer D. G. Steuart said Wednesday.

He told the legislature the new plates, designed for safer night driving, will cost more to produce and there will be a rise of one dollar per vehicle in licence fees.

* * *

The costs of the plates varies with the type of vehicle. The colors for 1970 will be white with green lettering — the reverse of the 1969 combination. The colors are those of the Saskatchewan Roughriders football club.

Another Liberal cabinet minister announced there will be no boost this year in private passenger and farm truck insurance rates.

Dave Boldt, minister in charge of Saskatchewan Government Insurance Office, a crown corporation, said the last such increase was in 1957.

There was a brief flurry when Boldt referred to a suggestion that an opposition member made Tuesday about imposing a one-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax, to help the car insurance fund.

'Beware Fast-Buck' Invaders

By JIM HUME

Mayor Courtney Haddock urged Wednesday that Victoria real estate people make it tougher for "carpetbaggers and fast-buck artists" to locate in the city.

He made the appeal during a speech to the Victoria Real Estate Board at the Empress.

Haddock said he realized those present were salesmen.

"But I don't think you should go overboard when trying to get people to come here to live," he said. "What we want is selective selling, not mass selling.

"Don't make it too easy for the carpetbaggers and the fast-buck artists to come in here."

The mayor did not explain what he meant by "carpetbaggers and fast-buck artists."

While appealing for more careful appraisal of the people invited to come to Victoria to stay, Haddock said he felt the real estate business was missing a great opportunity to publicize the city.

Set Up Victoria Houses

"With your connections right across the country it shouldn't be too hard to set up what you might call a Victoria House in every major city," he said.

"It wouldn't cost you anything and it wouldn't cost the city anything. All you have to do is persuade one business in every city to put a Victoria display in its front window."

The mayor added that he thought such advertising would cut down on the annual expenses of the Victoria Publicity Bureau.

"About 20 years ago we had a couple of ferries bringing in a handful of cars. Now we have a ferry every hour bringing in 250 cars.

"We've reached our objective haven't we? What do we want, a boat every 15 minutes."

Haddock started to voice objections to the proposed multi-million, multi-storey high-rise tower to be built near the Bay.

"Can you imagine a 38-storey building towering over the Bay?" he asked. "How many of you think that's a good idea. Come on, let's have a show of hands."

Vote Favored Tower

The vote was about three to one in favor of the tower.

"Well," shrugged the mayor "I'll have to be guided by you people."

And he added ruefully: "When I was at Woodwards we used to make a decision and ask why the job wasn't done yesterday. It's different at city hall."

The mayor also appealed for support in his push for total amalgamation of the four core municipalities.

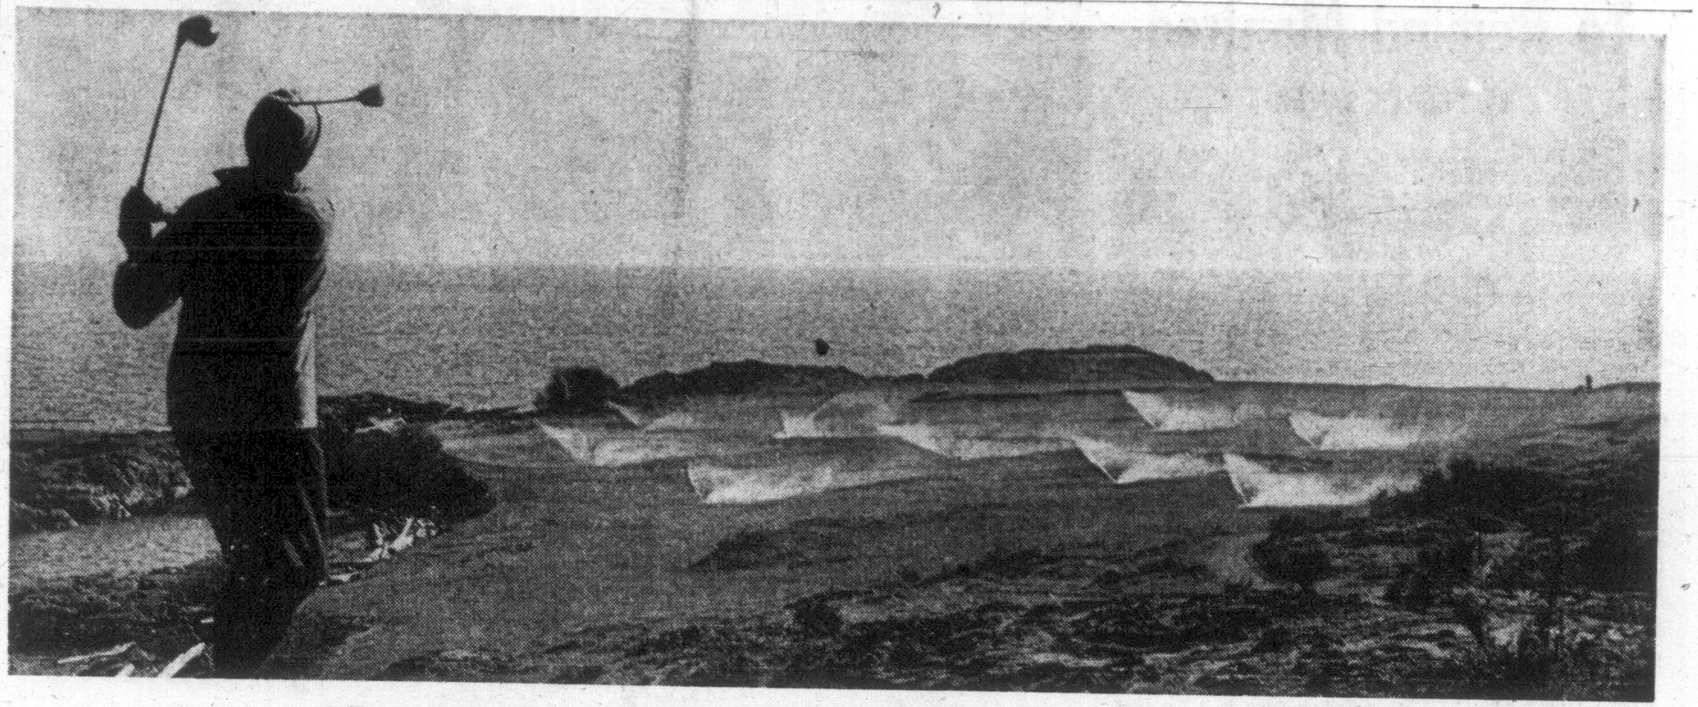
"Wherever you live, Esquimalt, Oak Bay, Saanich or Victoria you should be telling your elected representatives that you want amalgamation," he said.

"And if we can't get full amalgamation, let's at least amalgamate some of our essential services.

"I'm not going to mention any names, but we have three pretty unhappy police forces around here because of the actions of one municipality.

"Everybody agreed on a certain pay raise and then one municipality went and gave their policemen more than the others. The men on the other three police forces are pretty unhappy that they're not getting as much as the fourth."

Last year Saanich broke the formerly united negotiating ranks and agreed to a higher pay scale than Oak Bay, Victoria and Esquimalt.



The Water Hazards Pop Up Everywhere

View from the seventh has changed considerably at Royal Victoria Golf Club in Oak Bay. Irrigation operations that keep the turf springy have been revolutionized with the first fully automatic pop-up sprinkling system in Canada. Operated from a central console, sprinklers can be electronically scheduled to water fairways and recessed when not in use. Installation of the system, worth $115,000, began in September and was completed last week. (Photo by Bill Halkett.)

Uvic Barriers Stiffen Again

Restrictions on enrolment at the University of Victoria will apply to second-year students this fall as well as first-yeear students who were hit by the move last year.

Uvic's board of governors, in a statement Wednesday, blamed "unprecedented demands on its facilities" in the first and second years.

To cope with the anticipated demand, the board has authorized a priority system for admission and re-registration.

In the first year, highest priority will go to B.C. students who have graduated on the academic-technical program and who have obtained an average of at least C plus in all Grade 11 and 12 courses except physical education and guidance.

The university expects to be able to admit all students in this highest priority category," the governors said.

PROBABLES

In addition, it is "highly probable" that places can be found for those in the next priority category, B.C. students coming from Grade 12 who have attained at least an average of C as well as those in certain other first-year classifications.

These other classifications include students who in a previous session at Uvic obtained satisfactory standing in three of their five courses, students from Grade 13 (B.C.) and transfer students from district and regional colleges who have the same qualifications.

"In doubt is the possibility of finding the places for students in the remaining priority categories: Grade 12 students whose average is less than C; students who fail at Uvic in 1969-70; and students who are not permanent residents of B.C.," the governors said.

FIVE COURSES

In the second year, highest priority will be given to applications from students who have passed five full courses at the university or in Grade 13 (B.C.) or at district and regional colleges.

It is "highly probable" that students from these three streams with four courses successfully completed will be granted places.

"However, there is some doubt about finding places for students who will have unsatisfactory standing at the University of Victoria for the current session and for students from out of province," the governors said.

FULTON HERE ON MARCH 20 FOR SPEECH

E. Davie Fulton, chairman of the B.C. Law Reform Commission and former federal minister of justice, will address the annual meeting of the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island March 20 at 7 p.m. at the Red Lion Motor Inn.

Fulton, also a former leader of the B.C. Progressive Conservative Party, will speak on The Law and the Need for Reform.

GARTRELL

School Policy 'Short-Sighted'

A request from Education Minister Donald Brothers that the Greater Victoria School Board reassess its classroom needs brought a stinging rebuke from the board's chairman.

Dr. Carron Jameson said provincial short-sightedness results in "shoddy, temporary and inefficient buildings."

Brothers' letter to the board says enrolment projections on which the board has based capital spending requirements have not proved out. He says there now are more than 4,000 fewer students in Greater Victoria schools than the board expected.

* * *

Jameson, at noon, had not received the letter made public by Brothers on Wednesday. It was sent in reply to a board letter sent Sept. 20 in which the board asked the department to release money, approved in a 1967 referendum, which is needed to repair sanitary facilities at Monterey School in Oak Bay.

The essence of the problem is that while voters approve projects in a referendum, the province retains the right of later approval and decides whether the money is to be released.

In May, 1967, voters approved a $13 million referendum — Referendum 10 — for capital spending in the school district.

It was intended, on the basis of projected enrolment, to provide 264 more classrooms in the district.

The board projection was, by Oct. 31, 1969, for 23,805 elementary pupils and 12,328 secondary students for a total 36,133.

Brothers' letter says the actual figures are 19,519 elementary, 12,178 secondary for a 31,697 total which is 4,436 less than the projection.

Jameson said he is at a loss to explain the figure differences, adding that the sole determining factor in the board's recommendations is "education needs."

He disagreed with Brothers' statement that there are 16 excess classrooms in the district.

"The department may feel that any classroom that is not chock-a-block with 35 to 40 students each day is in excess.

* * *

"But it has been proven that splitting up of classes for fast and slow learners and children with special problems is an important factor."

Says Brothers: ". . . your review of the Monterey situation . . . brings to my attention the total problems relative to the district.

"In view of the Referendum 10 over-projection; in view of the excess classrooms in the elementary system; in view of the excess building in spite of decreasing enrolment at Willows (elementary in Oak Bay); I would recommend the board reassess its position completely in light of these facts.

Bishop Sees Leaders Among Dissenters

Some of our future leaders, says the new Anglican Bishop of Vancouver Island, "will come from those who are most dissatisfied with conditions today."

A dedicated optimist and believer in youth, Dean Frederick Gartrell of Ottawa says he has "every faith in the future."

The recently-elected bishop was making his first visit to the diocese since his election Feb. 6. In an interview, he said he sees a new form of religion among youth.

"I find them very religious, but not in a traditional way. They have a feeling for religion that is expressed in such things as CUSO, the Peace Corps, Marches for Millions and civil rights.

"These are practical expressions of a deep religious concern and their dissatisfaction with the established order of things is part of that concern."

A dapper, brown-eyed man with dark hair, a quick step and a lively voice, Gartrell looks much younger than his 55 years.

He flew out from Ottawa Wednesday to spend a few days with Dean Brian Whitlow of Chirst Church Cathedral, who has been administrator of the diocese since the death of Bishop John Anderson in November.

"I have visited Victoria as a tourist," he said, "but it will take me some time to get acquainted with the Vancouver Island diocese."

It is expected Gartrell will be consecrated bishop in Christ Church Cathedral some time in April.

He has been dean of Christ Church Cathedral, Ottawa, since 1962 and his wife and four children are still living there.

Arthur Mayse . . .

WE WERE FOLLOWING our dog down the beach trail this morning when I glimpsed a marvel of nature through spring's lacework of new green. It was a forked sapling, with trunk just thick enough to provide a comfortable grip, and arms branching upward in matched curves.

The sight set memory tapping. Good slingshot prongs don't grow in every thicket, and here was a near-perfect example.

For a moment I was tempted to secure that wild-cherry crotch for future use. But my jack-knife was up at the house, and anyway, I still bear painfully in mind what happened when I last fooled around with primitive artillery.

★

Still, back in a less complex and more innocent world, I was a fair-to-middling hand with a slingshot, and with practic might still manage to jump a can at 20 paces.

It would have to be a customized slingshot, of course—one made in spring when the sap is stirring, with a finicky concentration on proportion, heft and pull. It might also need a magic that no adult is equipped to supply.

First, after that prong was freed of its bark and trimmed to size, it would be necessary to improve on the natural curve of its arms.

★

A boy bent on achieving perfection would take a shaving here and another there from the inside of those curves. He wouldn't be satisfied until they bent evenly to form a 'U'.

He would then tie them in that position with a length of kitchen string, and ease the prong into the oven of his mother's wood-and-coal range.

In this operation, careful timing was important. Once I made the mistake a slipping a bent and trussed prong behind the weekend roast, where it stayed beyond rescue to be cooked to a fare-ye-well.

The carefully-scissored strips of balck or red inner tube that powered our slingshots had to have the proper degree of elasticity, and the leather oval that pouched our ammunition could be neither too thin nor too thick.

When all was trimmed, steamed, fitted and lashed, one finishing step still remained. This was to wrap the handle with black friction tape so that it would not slip in one's grasp.

The result of all this fussy attention to detail was a shooting-piece that holstered nicely in the hip pocket of a pair of bib overalls, and in use became an extension of the owner's arm.

★

Good shots weren't hard to find, but as in any art, the authentic virtuoso was rare.

I knew one such. His pet prong was sheathed in drugstore adhesive tape. It boasted a pair of translucent square-cut English rubbers, and with it he never missed.

We were popping clamshells on a beach one day when an adult stroller paused to watch. He was both portly and pompous, and it wasn't long before he horned in.

"Not bad," he conceeded, "but I'll bet you can't break 10 in a row."

★

The marksman gave him a cool glance, fitted a pebble, and exploded another clamshell.

"At that range," the intruder taunted, "how could you miss?" Then, boasting the while about how good a slingshooter he was when young, he propped 10 clamshells at extreme range, and produced a quarter.

We gathered a bunch of well matched pebbles. My companion drew to the angle of his jaw and clouted the extreme left shell. Methodically he reduced the row. Then he bade me toss an extra shell in air and took it stylishly on the wing.

The man gave him a disapproving scowl, dropped his quarter in the shingle—where we found it after long search—and strode off.

That was slingshooting, and once on another beach I told some boys of a later generation about it.

My audience listened politely. Then one of the boys produced a slingshot from his hip pocket and offered it for a tryout.

It was a factory-made product. The prong was too big and felt all wrong, and the rubbers had too much stretch.

One of the kids propped a clamshell. I fitted a pebble, tilted the arms a little sideways for better sighting, drew, aimed, and let fly.

★

The shell didn't break. Instead, I hit my own thumbnail, and acquired a black bruise to point any one of several morals.

It's not my intention to review them here, but in sum, they explain why that almost-perfect crotch will remain untampered-with among the springtime greenery.

'Social Woes Can Destroy Us'

Social Welfare Minister P. A. Gaglardi wants Victoria businessmen to call him at 382-6111, extension 3600.

"Tell us what you need in the way of hired help, and we'll try to assist you as fast as we can," the minister told a meeting of Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce in the McPherson Theatre Wednesday.

Gaglardi spoke of the new rehabilitation office he has set up in the Legislative Buildings and in eight other centres across the province. "We want you businssmen to help us out. Call us whenever you need any kind of help and we'll do all we can to help you. And, remember, it's our duty to help those who cannot help themselves."

Gaglardi said free enterprise is on trial today as never before, and its survival depends on helping the poor and the unemployed. "If we don't look after our social problems, they will destroy us as they have destroyed other free enterprise systems."

The minister said he had "lain awake at nights" worrying over persons who were unemployed or seemed "unemployable," and had decided his ministry should be concerned with "rehabilitation" rather than "welfare."

SABOTAGES PRIDE

"Welfare sabotages a man's pride. He may be glad to get the money the state hands out but, inside, he's unhappy because he doesn't feel part of a creative society."

Gaglardi said any unemployed person who visits his office in the Legislative Buildings will be handed a card to fill out, and "everything possible will be done to find out what he or she is best suited for."

"We will only give them a cheque if we can't find them a job," the minister said.

He added that giving welfare cheques to alcoholics is aiding and abetting a disease.

"They should be put in places where they can be helped, not subsidized in visiting the nearest liquor store or beer parlor. This is horrible."

Gaglardi spoke of the dangers of inflation and said the government is putting in legislation to curb credit buying to a reasonable degree.

Q. Who was Werner Stephan and what did he do.—A.B.

A. Stephan, says the Guiness Book of Records, was a German bomb disposal expert who defused 8,000 unexploded devices in West Berlin between 1945 and 1957. He worked on everything from fragmentation bombs to huge blockbusters, but ironically he was killed by a small grenade on the Grunewald blasting site.

COSTS FORCING SWITCH TO N-POWER

Last B.C. River Dammed?

By JOHN MIKA

British Columbia this week turned the corner to head into the atomic age.

Once across that threshhold it seems inprobable the province will turn back to damming major rivers for power development.

That appears to be the import of Premier Bennett's announcement that he has asked Ottawa to help build a nuclear power plant near Duncan.

●

It seems to be the death notice for the Liard River project favored by Resources Minister Ray Williston and a victory for B.C. Hydro Chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum and former co-chairman Dr. Hugh Keenleyside who argued for a switch to nuclear generating stations.

While the running argument of the past three years between Williston and the two power utility administrators was fought on technical grounds, Bennett likely made his decision on the basis of his specialty — money.

●

The tremendous increase in interest rates, which has played hob with costing projections for his pet "two-river power policy," seriously undermines the chief argument the premier has used in favoring hydro-electric generation — lower operating costs if dams are big enough to achieve economies of scale in capital costs.

There's not much point to achieving lower operating costs at the price of crippling capital costs which will take generations to pay off.

The "two river-policy" was started too late to escape the penalties of soaring interest rates which developed after the decision to go hydro rather than nuclear as other areas were starting to do.

Today most countries of the world have nuclear power plants in operation — from tropical India to the top of Greenland's ice cap. Ontario has had one in operation almost three years, is completing a larger one and building three more to produce one-third of its power needs before the end of the decade.

Almost 5.5 million kilowatts — close to double the Peace and Columbia projects — will be generated in Ontario nuclear power stations within a few years.

Quebec, like Ontario, also appears to be switching from hydro and has started toward its first nuclear power plant.

The argument over the balance of costs began in B.C. as long ago as late 1966 and by the following April broke into the open with a Times article which pinpointed the proposed Duncan atomic station as the battleground.

●

At that time, Shrum and Kennleyside both were quoted as saying B.C. likely would not undertake any more major hydro-electric projects after the Peace and Columbia were completed and they urged construction of the first nuclear plant for southern Vancouver Island.

Keenleyside added that a firm decision between a new hydro giant and atomic power had to be made no later than 1972 and preferably earlier.

●

Williston disagreed, suggesting Vancouver Island's needs would be met by more submarine cables or expansion of the Jordan River plant and new hydro plants on northern Island rivers.

Bennett stayed out of the argument although privately he pointed out hydro power had an extra advantage because it could be interrupted during non-peak periods. But in the legislature he praised the Liard River proposal and authorized preliminary surveys to site a 2 million kilowatt project as the biggest single hydro installation of all.

. . . Turning Up Heat on Salmon

A switch by B.C. from hydro to nuclear energy does not eliminate a continuing problem for electrical generation in this province — preserving the salmon industry.

Damming rivers cut off spawning grounds — as well as flooding huge areas of land. The most logical hydro project in all B.C., the Fraser River, has consistently been forestalled because of the valuable fish runs.

Nuclear power plants eliminate that problem but pose another which, because of widespread concern over pollution problems, may prove even thornier to the government and B.C. Hydro's planners.

The immense heat developed by the atomic fuel is used to create steam to drive dynamos, but

BENSON VS. EXTREMISTS

Tax Reform 'Bomb' Needs Quick Defusing

By ANTHONY WESTELL

OTTAWA—Finance Minister Benson is under powerful pressure this week to switch tactics on tax reform and to relax austerity for the real victims of inflation.

He is being urged by Liberal MPs and other advisers to move swiftly to defuse the tense political situation by revising immediately his white paper on tax reform to settle some of the controversial issues and by raising pensions for old people in need in his coming budget.

'Challenged' to Choose Sides

As he strives to carry through tax reform, Benson is being challenged to choose political sides between the low income groups who would profit from his proposals and the middle class who would suffer.

As he battles to keep the lid on government spending and on taxes to restrain inflation by balancing the budget, he has to face the fact that people on fixed incomes are carrying far more than a fair share of the burden of his policies.

Before he published his tax paper in November Benson received from aides a forecast of the public reaction. He was warned that after the initial honeymoon there would be severe criticism, and he said quite cheerfully that he expected to get hell from the business community.

Benson's strategy was to ride out the storm while the committees of Commons and Senate completed their enquiries into the tax plan, and then to come forward with compromise legislation.

Extremists Now Well Organized

No one foresaw, however, that the extremist opponents of the white paper would become so well organized and so successful, apparently, in touching a public nerve.

The drive to mobilize the middle class on the tax issue outside the main stream of party politics beginning to resemble the far-right movements in the United States.

The hate-rumors which plagued Trudeau during the 1968 election are coming back into circulation, discussion is escaping the bounds of reason and responsibility and the poison of extremism is seeping into the political mood.

Another new political factor in the situation is that Conservative leader Robert Stanfield had decided to jump ahead of the parliamentary enquiries, to make a major political issue of the tax paper.

Benson is now being advised that he cannot sit back and take this punishment, from the extremists and the Tories, for the next several months. He must fight back.

Retains Freedom to Amend Plans

His difficulty is to devise a way of defending his proposals without becoming committed to them. He must be able to answer the critics while retaining enough freedom to amend his plans in the light of debate.

Benson's solution may be to move swiftly to meet some of the technical criticism of his proposals so that the fight will focus on matters of broad importance and principle.

By dropping the plan to tax unrealized capital gains, lifting the tax limits well clear of private homes and property, offering reassurance to small businessmen who feel threatened by new taxes, and clearing up some other irritants, Benson could disarm much criticism.

He has already promised to furnish a supplementary white paper to the Commons committee, explaining the reasoning behind his original proposals and describing alternatives. Some of this material has already gone to the committee in confidence, and other papers are in draft in the finance department.

Benson could fairly easily convert this supplementary paper into a revision of the original document, rolling back some ideas.

This would help to bring the debate back from what are essentially technical questions to the central issue of shifting the tax burden from the lower income groups to the middle and upper income classes.

Tenants Gain Rights In New Legislation

By BRUCE YEMEN

"Radical changes" in the landlord - tenant relationship were introduced into the legislature Wednesday night by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson.

A 66-section bill, amending the Landlord and Tenant Act, puts agreements between tenants and landlords on the same basis as other contracts and appears to strengthen the position of tenants.

But Peterson said in an interview he doesn't expect the bill to satisfy completely either tenants or landlords.

Among the major provisions are:

- Unless a municipal bylaw states otherwise, security deposits are prohibited. These are usually required for possible damage or cleaning costs, but Peterson said there had been abuse of the system by too many landlords.
- A landlord can however, require a deposit to be applied to the last month's rent under a lease agreement, but must pay the tenant six per cent annual interest on the money.
- The right of the landlord to seize goods and furniture for non-payment of rent is abolished. Rental debts would have to be collected on the same basis as other debts.
- Landlords cannot enter premises of a tenant without written notice to the tenant at least 24 hours in advance of the time of entry, which must be between 8 a.m. and 9 p.m. Exceptions to this rule are cases of emergency, of consent of tenant at time of entry, of landlord's right to show premises to prospective new tenants after notice to vacate has been given, and where the tenant has abandoned the premises.
- No lock may be altered on the premises by the landlord without the tenant's consent.

Hanoi Troops Continue Offensive Into Laos

VIENTIANE, Laos — Despite repeated bombing strikes by Laotian air force jets, North Vietnamese troops continued advancing today west of the Plain of Jars toward the highway linking this administrative capital with the royal capital of Luang Prabang.

Military sources, who reported the North Vietnamese advance, said Laotian ground forces had been withdrawn from the path of the Communist thrust. The resistance being offered to the advance, they said, was in the form of the bombing raids flown since Wednesday by T28 jets.

Meanwhile in Washington, with an angry attack against the American role in Laos, a group of senators has demanded the administration disclose how heavily the United States is involved in the Asian nation.

"The facts of our involvement have been concealed from the American people," Tennessee Democrat Albert Gore said during floor debate Wednesday, a charge supported by Senator Charles

Rioting Protesters Burn Bank

Times News Services

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — Rampaging demonstrators protesting the "capitalist establishment" burned a Bank of America branch to a skeleton today while outnumbered police and firemen watched helplessly.

Police reinforcements were called in as about 800 protesters watched the flames burn out the inside of the one-storey brick building.

One student said the branch of the biggest commercial bank in the United States was burned because "it holds the money for the war in Vietnam."

Then a solid phalanx of 240 helmeted officers swept through the campus community, Isla Vista, dispersing the crowd without a confrontation.

The retreating protesters pelted the oncoming officers with rocks and taunted them with shouts of "Piggy! Piggy! Piggy!" as they darted away.

The outbreak of fires and window smashing followed a campus speech Wednesday afternoon by William Kunstler, a defence lawyer in the Chicago Seven riot trial.

* * *

Kunstler told some 5,000 persons "the real violence doesn't occur in Santa Barbara."

"The real violence occurs in the backrooms of police stations.

"I think the shadow of the Swastika is on every courthouse, on universities, on government buildings, maybe even on the apartment door next to you."

However, students denied the Kunstler speech was responsible for the violence, saying it stemmed from long-standing problems. All the windows of the same bank which was burned Wednesday had been broken out on Tuesday afternoon, when the trouble started.

Sheriff James Webster had described the situation as "completely out of hand" Wednesday night. He asked Gov. Ronald Reagan for National Guard troops, but guardsmen were not mobilized.

* * *

The bank fire was set by several protesters who rolled a gasoline-soaked trash bin in through a smashed window and set it ablaze against a wall, deputies said. Students from a nearby fraternity put out the blaze, but protesters fired it up again.

The one-square-mile Isla Vista community is populated mainly by apartment-dwelling students from the adjacent University of California campus six miles north of Santa Barbara.

The demonstrators explained they were protesting the war in Vietnam, the "capitalist establishment" that finances it and what a student called "increasing police repression aimed at stifling political dissent."

IT'S A DOG'S LIFE in the credit card business. And to testify this fact is Tareytown, a Dalmation. Tareytown's owner, Donald Boyd of Troy, Mich., received an application blank in the mail and bet his wife that the company "would give these cares to a dog." They did. It was returned with the name Tareytown Boyd, 2.7 years old and occupation as watch-dog. The dog has now received letters from companies asking him to use his credit because he's a "preferred customer." (AP Wirephoto)

Extended Care Bed Plans Said Already Inadequate

A sample survey of private hospital patients in Greater Victoria shows there are enough who qualify for $1-a-day insurance care to more than half fill the 675 extended care beds planned for the hospital district.

Consultant Andrew Pitkethley told the region's hospital board meeting Wednesday there are probably another 60 or so patients in acute care beds qualified for extended care facilities.

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock added there are undoubtedly a number of people being cared for at home who would also be eligible.

DISCRIMINATION

"Right off the bat are extended care beds are gone before they are built."

The shortage of extended care beds means there is discrimination against many private hospital patients, said Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford.

"There are nearly 400 patients in private hospitals paying $300 to $500 month for care when they really qualify for $1-a-day care.

"We must move quickly on extended care hospitals."

The first 150 such beds, at Gorge Hospital, will likely be under construction this fall with facilities for another 75 to be started in the Saanich Peninsula early next year.

Board chairman, Mayor Jim Cumming of North Saanich, said the survey points out the need for extended care beds beyond what it now planned.

Pitkethley, said the needs had been calculated on the BCHIS basis of one for every 50 people over age 65 but the number of older people in the district is on the increase.

Art Gallery Gets Royal Handkerchief

The Queen has given the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria an embroidered handkerchief which was made for Queen Victoria for her diamond jubliee.

The gift is a gesture of appreciation for the exhibition Ladies and Gentlemen, the Queen Empress, organized by the gallery last May. The exhibition celebrated the 100th anniversary of the birth of Queen Victoria.

The handkerchief is described by Victoria and Albert Museum specialists in London as being a particularly fine example of English embroidery of the period.

A statement by the art gallery said it "fits admirably" into the collection of three centuries of English embroidery which an anonymous patron has been building up for the gallery.

Socred 'Sham' Charges Hartley

An NDP member of the special legislative committee on automobile insurance walked out of a meeting of the committee in disgust this morning.

William Hartley, MLA for Yale-Lillooet, charged that the meeting committee was being run as a "typical Social Credit sham."

The furore arose when Gordon Root, public relations representative for the Victoria Insurance Agents Association presenting a brief to the committee, said savings on the Saskatchewan government-run auto insurance plan were not as great as Hartley suggested.

When Hartley asked Root to enlarge on his remark committee chairman Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) gave the floor to another member of the committee.

The NDP MLA became angered at the move by Capozzi and said if the committee was going to be run under Social Credit "dictatorship" he was leaving.

Capozzi replied, "well walk out."

Hartley stormed out of the room.

During the meeting Root said he was satisfied some aspects of the Saskatchewan system could be introduced within the framework of the insurance system in B.C.

Costs could be reduced if appraisal of damaged vehicles was done by one person, rather than several appraisers in different auto body shops doing estimates on jobs they did not get.

'NOT TOO DEEP'

Capozzi said after the meeting that the committee was endeavoring to not go too deeply into insurance rate structures at that point. He added that it appeared Hartley was looking for a dispute as the NDP member indicated that he was going to bring up the matter during discussion of the estimates of the premier's office this afternoon.

The chairman said he was "disturbed" by Hartley's action and that it was not the intent of the committee to be political. Capozzi said he was merely following the general order of speakers.
